TRADE CONTROL EXPENSES ITEM IN LIVING COSTS

Increased Tax Bills Are in Prospect.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The high cost of government supervision of every business enterprise in the land is already an important factor in the increased cost of living, according to trade association officials here.

The cost of necessities of life has risen some 15 to 20 per cent since last spring. Part of the increase is attributed to the higher costs of production resulting from the reduced working hours and increased wages of labor. Part of it is attributed to the increased overhead expense of every industry resulting from the supervisory operations of the NRA.

In addition there are the looming increases in federal taxation to pay for the huge government outlays to fight the depression — direct expenditures and interest on government borrowings, which have been authorized up to date in the aggregate of 12 billion dollars.

Interest Costs Mounting.

What with the interest on the enormous borrowings, which will soon bring the public debt interest item close to one billion dollars a year, with the billions the government is virtually certain to lose on its loanings to state and local governments and private enterprises, and with the billions directly expended on public works, the dole, and other depression relief activities, a staggering tax bill for this and future generations is in prospect.

Income taxes are not likely ever again to be lower within the memory of living men, and probably will be higher, in the opinion of most authorities. And even though some of the present nuisance taxes are to be abolished with the repeal of prohibition and the receipt of a large excise tax revenue from liquor, there is general expectation that taxes on business of every sort will be increased eventually in order to meet the enormous cost of the recovery program.

Hesitant on Commitments.

The anticipation of an increased burden of taxation to be borne by business enterprise may not be reflected in the recent rise of prices but, according to industrial executives, it is responsible to a large degree for the hesitancy of industry to make future commitments. Taxes are an important element of the cost of production, and so long as uncertainty of the cost of production prevails, business men will continue chary of making commitments.

The cost of the operation of the machinery of the NRA to business, actually and prospectively, is already entering into the rise of prices, according to trade association executives. The making of 1,000 codes of fair competition in which the NRA is now engaged, and the vast organizations set up to supervise business enterprise down to its minutest details, are contributing a new element of overhead expense to business not only indirectly in the shape of taxes but directly in the shape of new organization costs.

Form Trade Associations.

In order to come within the framework of the NRA every business enterprise now finds it essential to be a member of a trade association. New trade associations have been formed and old ones expanded. The cost of maintaining a trade association capable of functioning in the new setup has increased enormously. It must have more executives, more employes, more offices and plenty of funds for administration, travel, subsistence, etc.

It has become essential for nearly every trade association to maintain a headquarters in Washington with an executive and staff prepared to take up at a moment's notice the thousand and one details of the intricate questions arising at the NRA with relation to government supervision of the industry concerned. In the last three months scores of trade associations in addition to those already established here have opened offices in Washington. It may be disputed whether recovery is in evidence elsewhere but in Washington.

What with the trade associations piling into the capital to deal with the NRA and the Democratic law firms springing up to deal with everybody the "for rent" signs have fluttered down from the windows of office buildings like autumn leaves. Desirable of

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

FIND FOUR VIKINGS OF 1,500 YEARS AGO IN A FINNISH GRAVE

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Graves of four viking warriors and one woman have been opened on the site of an ancient burial ground, accidentally discovered by a farm laborer on an estate in the Kjulo district of southwestern Finland last August.

Nils Cleve, a noted antiquary, believes the discovery will prove one of the most important of its kind ever made in this country. The graveyard appears to belong to a period between 400 and 500 A. D.

With the warriors were found their huge cross handled swords, spears, and winged viking helmets. Two of the swords are decorated with precious stones and engraved scroll work, and evidently belonged to important chieftains.

Simmons is cashier in Gold's restaurant at 2809 Broadway. As he sat at the cash register the patron walked past him, leaving unpaid a check for about 60 cents. Simmons ran after him and in front of an automobile driven by J. Harrison, 3829½ Rokeby street. He wasn't seriously hurt.

Science Her Rival; Wife Asks $50,000

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The first alienation of affections suit in which science is named as an accomplice has been filed here. Mrs. Rose Garceau of Cambridge has asked the courts to award her $50,000 damages for the loss of her young scientist husband's love.

View Domains of Science.

Mrs. Garceau charges that Prof. and Mrs. Davis led her husband up on the cold mountain of science and showed him the glamour of the mysteries of death, deliberately breaking up the Garceau home. They argued, she said, that Garceau should be free to concentrate on the laboratory experiments conducted by himself and Dr. Davis in which they sought to perfect a mechanical device through which they could see what happens to the tissues of the body when death comes and life departs.

The battle between love and death in their homes, Mrs. Garceau says she will testify, was climaxed at midnight one night when Mrs. Davis, entering their apartment with a mysterious pass key, pleaded with her to give her husband up so he might be free to become famous as a scientist without domestic cares to bother him.

Says Mrs. Davis Warned Her.

Mrs. Garceau says Mrs. Davis called her selfish and warned her that her romance would be broken in favor of the laboratories, no matter what she did.

Then Garceau sought a divorce. Before the court he testified his wife threw him out of bed, kicked him, and refused to get his breakfast. The divorce was refused by Judge Colin Campbell. Mrs. Garceau says, in favor of her own plea for separate maintenance.

Just what Dr. Davis and her husband were doing in the laboratory is something of a mystery, Mrs. Garceau said. Her husband is a radio engineering expert. Dr. Davis is an expert on the tissues of the body and brain. They hoped, they said, to perfect a device which would enable them to see, or photograph, the change that takes place when death comes

FLORIDA WILL VOTE ON REPEAL TUESDAY; FARLEY GOES SOUTH

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Florida prohibitionists today made final appeals through the state's churches for a heavy vote on Tuesday against repeal of the 18th amendment.

Meanwhile repealists awaited the arrival of Postmaster General James A. Farley, who will close their campaign with a speech at Tampa tomorrow night.

A decision in favor of repeal in Tuesday's election will rank Florida as the thirty-third of the 36 states necessary for ratification of the 21st or repealing amendment. Prohibitionists so far have not carried a single state.

BUILDING AGENT IS FOUND SLAIN; SUSPECT MURDER

Donald Mecartney, 26 years old, who was rental agent for a building at 930 Spanish court in No Man's Land, between Wilmette and Kenilworth, was found shot to death yesterday in a field in Kane county, fifteen miles northwest of Elgin. State's Attorney George D. Carbary of Kane county asserted it was a suicide, although no motive had been found.

Mecartney's sister, Mrs. George Cotts of Elmhurst, and a brother, Newell Mecartney, an attorney living at 2310 Grant street, Evanston, say they suspect he was murdered. The brother pointed out that there were several bruises on the face and that the single bullet which killed Mecartney had taken a downward course.

Mecartney was in good health and had no financial difficulties, the lawyer said. An automobile, purchased in August, was found some distance away from the body on a county line road separating Kane and McHenry counties. Donald was unmarried and lived alone in the building for which he was agent.

TWINS TURN ON HOT WATER; ONE DEAD OF BURNS

Carl Van Balen, 10 months old, died yesterday in the county hospital of hot water burns suffered Saturday evening His twin brother, Donald, is in a critical condition at the hospital as a result of the scalding. The twins were placed in the bathtub of their home at 5544 West North avenue by the mother, Mrs. Beatrice Van Balen. When she left them to go to the yard of the home to bring in mattresses one of the twins turned on the hot water. The father of the children is John Van Balen, a draftsman.

Network Would Cost $100,000,000.

BY HAL FOUST.

A comprehensive system of elevated highways, revolutionary in engineering design and within reach of existing public finances, is proposed for Chicago in a report issued yesterday by Ald. John A. Massen [48th], chairman of the council traffic committee, on a study just completed by Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Harvard university traffic research bureau.

The survey is considered the most thorough ever made of a metropolitan street transportation problem and its conclusions are backed by factual data compiled during the last six years on all phases of the problem.

The plan outlined in the report would call for the construction of 160 miles of elevated highways within the next quarter of a century at a cost of approximately $100,000,000. Fifteen miles of safe speedways are proposed for immediate construction at a cost of approximately $8,000,000, exclusive of certain easements and special bridge work.

Routes Are Outlined.

Listed in the program for immediate construction of "limited ways," as the report refers to these superhighways, are the following routes in the priority of their importance to traffic:

1. In Randolph street from Clinton street to Ogden avenue and thence westerly in Lake street by converting the Chicago Rapid Transit company's structure into a superhighway.

2. In Kingsbury street, northwest from the loop over the trackage and right of way of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad to Clybourn avenue and thence in Clybourn to a temporary terminal at Ashland avenue.

3. Connect the outer drive with Indianapolis boulevard by way of Stony Island avenue and South Chicago avenue.

4. In Archer avenue from State street to a temporary terminal at Ashland avenue and with provision for ultimate extension to the Chicago airport and to connect with a depressed boulevard in the bed of the Illinois and Michigan canal.

Gives General Direction.

The report does not recommend specific routes for the entire system to be built in twenty-five years, but it does propose their general directions as indicated by studies of traffic volumes, origins and destinations of motor travel, and surveys of transportation economics.

It proposes north and south elevated highways, running from city limits to city limits, placed about two miles apart. Between the radials stretching northwest and southwest from the loop would be three east and west routes in addition to the Randolph-Lake street project. The lake front outer drive would be continued from Evanston to the Indiana line.

Ald. Massen admits that the first impression of the average citizen on hearing a proposal involving the expenditure of $100,000,000 might be to classify it as a theorist's dream beyond realization. The alderman points out, however, that the board of local improvements in the sixteen years between 1915 and 1931 spent $135,647,602

Noted Surgeon Describes Men of Year 2033

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

The man of 2033 was described from the standpoint of a physician yesterday by Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland, head of one of the country's great surgical and medical clinics. He was one of several speakers who talked to laymen in laymen's language at programs arranged at the World's Fair by the American College of Surgeons, which today opens its annual clinical congress in Chicago.

This man of the next century, Dr. Crile said, first of all will live a longer life. He pointed out that medical progress has already lengthened the average life span from 18 years in the century following Columbus to 58 years at present. One of Dr. Crile's colleagues, Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., says that before the next century has passed this life expectancy will have leaped to 77 years, seven past the biblical three score and ten.

Sees Conquest of T. B. and Diabetes.

The man of the next century, Dr. Crile said, will no longer fear the great white plague, for by then, he predicted, medical science will have conquered tuberculosis and, along with it, diabetes. Because the laymen of that far day will have been educated to what physicians already know, the importance of focal infections in the teeth and elsewhere as causes of disease, diseases of the heart, blood vessels and kidney which arise from those causes, will be greatly reduced. So will all other infectious diseases.

On the other hand, those heart, kidney and other organic ailments caused by nervous and mental strain—what Dr. Crile termed "the kinetic drive of environment conditions"— may even be increased. And cancer, while its nature will eventually be disclosed, will still claim many victims.

But medical research will do more than guard the health and increase the life span of the man of 2033, Dr. Crile said. It will have a profound effect upon his education and preparation for life.

Children Trained by Physicians.

"The well child, under the guidance of a physician," he said, "probably will be trained in a way very different from our present haphazard methods. As time goes on it will be discovered what measures build up and what deteriorate the child's nervous system and mentality.

"When the mechanism that operates the brain is understood then there will be an accurate knowledge as to what patterns of action should be placed in the brain. It will be understood that the brain itself and the character and mentality and the emotional life of the child and of man are constructed by the environment—by parents, by teachers and by society."

The advancement which will make all this possible will come principally in other fields than surgery, Dr. Crile believes, because surgeons have conquered most of their obstacles already. Dr. Mayo, in an interview during the day, phrased it more generally and vividly.

"The doctors of our country," Dr. Mayo said, "are in a peculiar situation. They are talking themselves out of their jobs. Having developed the science of medicine until the cause of disease, its prevention, its treatment and cure are known, the application of these principles is to be appreciated by an educated public."

Points Out Fields for Conquest.

But Dr. Crile pointed out wide fields which still remain for conquest.

"The field of the internist," he said, "will be widened by advances in biochemistry and biophysics as applied especially to nutrition and to the ductless glands and to psychology.

"Every physician will be trained to understand the psychological problems

Forty or more persons, in all parts of the country, it is reported, will face prosecution as a result of the secret federal investigation here of the $250,000 mail robbery which was committed at Clark and Adams streets last Dec. 6. Already twenty-six persons are under arrest here and in other cities, and one other person—Edgar B. Lebensberger, owner of the 225 club, was found shot to death last Friday six hours before his indictment was revealed for complicity in disposing of securities taken by the robbers.

Whether the forty persons hunted in the roundup now being made by the federal agents include some of those already under arrest has not been indicated. The identities of the forty have been kept secret to enable the authorities to capture them before they could learn they were wanted.

Accused of Selling Loot.

It is believed that the majority of those now being sought would be charged with disposing or attempting to dispose of part of the stolen securities. Some may be named as the actual robbers, it is said. Thus far there has been no hint as to the identities of the bandits. Those already arrested are not involved in the actual holdup, so far as is known.

With their traditional secrecy federal agents continued their many sided investigations last night. Although they would not confirm this report, it was rumored they were watching a west side politician. This man has been suspected for some time of being linked with at least one element of the gang involved in the mail holdup. However, postoffice inspectors, it was said, have not been able definitely to establish the suspected connection.

Deny Guilfoyle Story.

Until a late hour yesterday the agents were busy in the United States courthouse working on the case under the direction of District Attorney Dwight H. Green. No comments were forthcoming from Mr. Green or others on the progress of the case. Earlier in the day it was reported they were seeking Marty Guilfoyle, northwest side gambler, but this report was denied last night both by investigators and Guilfoyle himself, who said he was available for questioning at any time.

Meanwhile police and federal men kept one eye on the Lebensberger case. Lebensberger, world war aviator and owner of the night club at 225 East Superior street, was found shot to death Friday morning in his gold coast residence at 1258 Lake Shore drive. According to the verdict of a coroner's jury, he committed suicide, the motive supposedly being his advance knowledge that he was to be indicted.

Murder Suspicion Aroused.

However, District Attorney Green raised the question that Lebensberger might have been murdered. It was hinted that the government might have looked forward to Lebensberger as a government witness and that hoodlums fearing such a development killed him to insure silence.

Lebensberger was a figure in gambling circles, as has been John J. [Boss] McLaughlin, former state legislator, who was indicted with him in the mail robbery case. Lebensberger, it is charged, figured in the disposal of stolen bonds.

There were reports that the federal operatives have discovered several safe deposit boxes held in Lebensberger's name and that these are to be opened today in the presence of the public administrator. District Attorney Green, however, denied such reports.

Lebensberger as a Link.

Investigators declared that Lebensberger was an ideal agent for the disposal of stolen securities because of his associations in both the upper and lower strata of society. In the quietly lavish atmosphere of his night resorts the underworld rubbed elbows with the top hat trade and Lebensberger's beautiful wife, Luella Faecher Lebensberger, dilettante artist, entertained some of her husband's fashionable gambling patrons in their Lake Shore drive mansion.

Lebensberger's friendly association with Gus Winkler, north side booze and gambling boss and pal of Fred [Killer] Burke, notorious bank robber now in prison, made Winkler a figure in the mail robbery investigation, but the federal agents said they had not been able to link him with the conspiracy. Winkler succeeded Ted Newberry, slain gang leader, as head of the north side crime syndicate. Newberry numbered Lebensberger among his closest friends.

The 26 men under arrest in the mail robbery investigation include McLaughlin, Sans, and seven others in Chicago; five in Kansas City, two in Denver, two in Minneapolis, two in Boston, two in San Antonio, two in Springfield, Ill., one in New York, and one in Detroit.

The trail of the robbery investigation has also led to other cities throughout the country. Federal investigators believe that the solution of this case will result in breaking up a nation-wide stolen securities ring, with headquarters in Chicago.

District Attorney Green refused to say whether the men already under arrest include the five or six gunmen who took the $250,000 loot in the loop holdup last December, but postoffice inspectors say the identity of the actual robbers is known.

VISITOR AT FAIR DIES OF INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

Joseph Smith, 33 years old, 5116 Moffett street, St. Louis, Mo., a World's Fair visitor, died last night in the Chicago hospital of injuries suffered Saturday night when the automobile he was driving collided with another car at 43d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Toby Foster, 58 years old, a mail carrier of Mount Auburn, Ill., died in St. Luke's hospital shortly after he was struck at 24th street and South Park way by an automobile driven by Glenn R. Lagerstrom, 22 years old, 6931 South Paulina street.

The Chicago Lawn police yesterday were attempting to identify the body of a victim of a hit and run driver. The man, about 65 years old, was found earlier in the day lying in Cicero avenue near 63d street. No witnesses to the accident could be found.

These deaths and one other increased the 1933 Cook county motor toll to 798. The other victim:

Benjamin Parelli, 19 years old, 1413 Flournoy street. Died in the county hospital of injuries incurred Saturday when the automobile in which he was riding crashed into a light post in front of 1335 West Harrison street.

ACTOR IS SLAIN; SCARF USED TO STRANGLE HIM

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Strangled with his own neck scarf, Townsend D. Paull, 35, former screen and stage actor, was found dead in his bedroom today, the victim, police said, of some one who robbed him of $20 in cash, a ring, and topcoat, and escaped in his motor car. The car was later found abandoned on a road leading to San Pedro.

Paull was a disabled war veteran. At one time he appeared in pictures and in legitimate plays in New York.

FLOODS DESTROY ALL CATTLE NEAR HONDURAS TOWN

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Floods have destroyed all cattle on plantations in the neighborhood of the town of Sulaco, it was officially reported today. The loss of human life was not known. The waters also caused havoc in the banana zone around Progreso, where many houses were ruined. Foreigners were reported safe there. The town of Reitoca was also affected.

Air Show Is Held to Raise Fund for Flyers' Memorial

A large crowd attended an air show yesterday to raise a fund for a memorial to the two Lithuanian flyers who were killed in a crash on July 17 after they had crossed the Atlantic on a flight for Lithuania. The air show was held at 87th street and Harlem avenue under the direction of a committee headed by Anthony Kalvaitis, Lithuanian consul. The memorial to the flyers, Stephen Darius and Stanley Girenas, will be erected in Lincoln park, it was announced by Stanley Darius, a brother. About $5,000 was collected at the air show. A fund of $50,000 is sought.

URSCHEL KIDNAP LEADERS FLOWN TO PENITENTIARY

Bailey and Bates Now in Leavenworth.

Leavenworth, Kas., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Federal prison doors clanged shut here today behind Harvey Bailey and Albert Bates, sentenced to life terms for participation in the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel.

They were brought by airplane, accompanied by ten guards, from Oklahoma City.

Near Scene of Prison Break.

Eight miles away stands the Kansas state penitentiary, from which Bailey led eleven convicts in a spectacular break last Memorial day. He had served ten months there of a ten to fifty year sentence for a Fort Scott, Kas., bank robbery.

Bates, one of the two men who kidnaped Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma City oil operator, from his home the night of July 22, was an escaped Michigan convict. Seven persons were convicted of a part in that plot.

Bailey and Bates were given prison clothing and will be under observation for three days before being assigned to work.

Kelly and Wife Next.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The last of the defendants in the Urschel kidnap case, George [Machine Gun] Kelly and his wife, Kathryn Kelly, go on trial tomorrow morning before Judge Edgar S. Vaught.

Among the witnesses subpoenaed by the prosecution are Ruth Shannon, 14 year old daughter of R. G. Shannon; Armon Shannon, Ruth's brother; Pauline Frye, 15 year old daughter of Mrs. Kelly by a former marriage, and Luther Arnold and his 12 year old daughter, hitch-hikers picked up by the Kellys during their 20,000 mile flight from the law. The Kellys were apprehended through information given by the Arnolds. Armon's mother and his father, R. G. Shannon, were among those, including Bailey and Bates, sentenced yesterday.

Other Witnesses Summoned.

Other witnesses summoned are Cass Coleman and Will Casey, Coleman, Tex., farmers charged with conspiracy to harbor the Kellys. Coleman, an uncle of Kathryn Kelly, has been held in jail in Abilene, Tex., since $73,250 of the Urschel ransom money was found buried on his farm. Casey was released a week ago under $10,000 bond.

Shannon was granted a 60 day stay of execution of sentence to adjust his business; Mrs. Shannon was allowed ten days in which to dispose of her property; Armon, after appearing as a witness in the Kelly trial, will return to his wife and two children on the Shannon farm.

Eight Fall Ill After Dinner; Blame Poison Mushrooms

Eight persons were seriously ill in the Belmont hospital last night as a result, physicians believe, of eating poison mushrooms. The mushrooms were picked in the Glenview forest preserve and served at a dinner Saturday by Michael Burns, 60 years old, 5839 Forest Glen avenue, one of the victims. The victims received prompt medical attention after becoming ill and it is said they all will recover.

Those in the hospital besides Mr. and Mrs. Burns are Charles Owen and Mrs. Anna Owens, Miss Alice Saunder, 4659 North Springfield avenue, and three guests from Ohio, Ill., Mrs. Jane Hannan, Le Roy Hannan, and Mrs. Alice Finn.

State Awaits Ruling Today on Crime War Venue Pleas

The right of defendants in criminal cases to demand and obtain a change of venue from Cook county because of the war against crime will be decided today by two judges in two separate murder cases. State's Attorney Courtney said that the rulings would determine the state's course of action in a number of murder cases awaiting trial.

In the event the prosecution is successful in resisting the change of venue motions at least three important murder cases are expected to go to trial this week, two of them today. The Criminal court judges have ten murder cases on the dockets for today, and it was indicated that some others besides the three may be forced to trial.

The big fight on the change of venue issue will be before Judge William V. Brothers. John Scheck, who is already under a death sentence; Carl Grundhoefer and Frank Keglovitz are scheduled to go to trial on a charge of murdering Harry Mueller, cashier of a Niles Center bank.

State Blocked Many Times.

The prosecution has been rebuffed many times in attempting to bring this trio to trial. Several weeks ago a continuance was obtained by taking a last minute change of venue from Judge Walter Steffen after he had cleared his docket and prepared to start the trial. The case was then assigned to Judge Brothers, who could not give it an immediate trial because of other pending matters.

James M. Burke and George Crane, who have appeared as defense attorneys in a majority of the important criminal cases, will seek further delay today when they ask Judge Brothers to send the case from Cook county to some other county in the state for trial. They are representing the defendant Keglovitz.

In affidavits presented to the state's attorney's office the attorneys charge that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in Cook county because of the recent actions of Judges Benjamin Epstein and Thomas Green in verbally chastising jurors who failed to bring in what they [the judges] considered proper verdicts. Prospective jurors will be influenced by these statements which were given publicity, the attorneys charge.

State to Demand Trial.

Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan declared that he will resist the motion and demand immediate trial. The death penalty is to be asked for all defendants, he said.

The other case in which the change of venue issue is to be decided is that of James Ryan, alleged Touhy gangster, who is charged with slaying Joseph Rinelli, a northwest side roadhouse keeper. Attorney William Scott Stewart has asked for a change of venue from Cook county in behalf of Ryan. Judge James F. Fardy will rule on this petition. The Ryan case is not expected to go to trial until later because Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty will be occupied in another case.

Judge Harry B. Miller announced yesterday that he has cleared his calendar for the start of the trial of Richard Basile, Dominick Di Nardi, and George Chevas, alleged companions of Tony Rocco, convicted slayer of Policeman Maurice Marcusson. Rocco, who was given a separate trial, was found guilty by a jury and sentenced to 199 years in the penitentiary. Emil Manzone, another defendant in the same indictment, was also given a separate trial.

In addition to the murder cases on the calendars for today the Criminal court judges have 13 robbery indictments scheduled for disposition. In all 62 indictments appear on the dockets of the ten Criminal court judges.

BREWERS OFFER REWARD IN WAR ON RACKETEERS

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The Brewers Board of Trade, Inc.—made up of old-line brewers in New York City and vicinity—today advertised that it would pay a reward of $5,000 to the first person to furnish evidence which will result in a felony conviction for any one employing threats, intimidation or corercion in the sale or distribution of beer. The advertisement is signed by nineteen brewing firms.

The advertisement says that no convictions have followed "recent racketeering outrages in the sale and distribution of beer" here "because witnesses have failed to identify persons gathered in by the police." The reward will be paid, it was announced, to the first person—or divided among the persons—whose testimony results in the first conviction.

"No industry," declares the advertisement, "can long endure, part criminal and part law abiding; either the honest elements will prevail or the criminal underworld forces will bring it inevitably to destruction."

HOMICIDE RATE IN NEW YORK SHOWS INCREASE

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The suicide rate in the state for August, 14.4 per 100,000 of population, was the lowest for any month since September, 1929, while the homicide rate of 6.0 was the highest except for 1930 and 1931 since 1907, the department of health showed in statistics issued today. The number of deaths from all types of accidents in the state during August reached 86.3, the highest point for any month with one exception in three years.

In contrast to this record a mortality of 25.4 from automobile accidents was the lowest for August, with the exception of last year, since 1928.

Four Acting Postmasters for Illinois Are Named

DRYS MOBILIZE TO FIGHT AGAIN FOR PROHIBITION

Anti-Saloon League Makes Plea for Support.

Leaders of the drys declared in Chicago yesterday that they were undaunted by the return of beer and wine and the imminent repeal of the prohibition law. They were, they announced, marshaling their forces to start all over again their battle to free the country of liquor.

Dr George B. Safford, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois, sent a letter to the various Protestant church denominations of the state which have supported the league.

"We are not at the end of the fight to save America from drink," his letter said. "Prohibition is not dead and its lessons are not forgotten. It is merely suffering a temporary eclipse. The Anti-Saloon league announces that every means of illumination will be employed to teach the facts about alcohol and its destructiveness as a beverage. We cannot delay, while myriads of children and youth are being systematically entrapped by the Herod liquor traffic.

New Call to Battle.

"The Anti-Saloon league calls on those who love their fellow men to band together with us in a close fighting organization to find new men to represent us in the making of laws. We want you to help us banish this repeal moon from the national heavens. The present permissive liquor laws can, must and will be repealed. The twenty-first amendment can be repealed as easily as the eighteenth."

Dr. Safford made public a campaign program which was adopted by the national board of the Anti-Saloon league two weeks ago. It includes the following aims: To hold or regain state and local prohibition laws, to agitate for the election of governmental officials who will initiate or enforce dry laws, to get the highest proportion of voters to go to the polls in all elections, to teach the evils of drink to every one, and to institute a nation-wide young people's movement for total abstinence and prohibition.

W. C. T. U. Prepares for Action.

Mrs. Anna Marden De Yo, national secretary of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and Mrs. W. L. Ferguson, president of the Illinois W. C. T. U., declared that they will proceed with an intensified program of education along scientific lines. Mrs. Ferguson said that a new program of action will be discussed at the annual state convention of the W. C. T. U., which opens at Decatur tomorrow. The W. C. T. U., Mrs. Ferguson said, has been hampered somewhat by reduced financial support, but not greatly.

"We will continue our campaign more emphatically than ever," she said, "we are as strongly opposed to the use of liquor and to the old saloon as ever. Liquor is already being sold as it was before prohibition. The old time saloon with all of its destructive aspects is back now. There isn't even any pretense about it."

Deplores Lack of Finances.

Attorney Arthur M. Barnhart said that the Illinois Conference of Organizations Supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, of which he is president, will formulate a unified program with increased temperance education work as the chief weapon to be used in view of the changed conditions. Thirty-five dry organizations compose the conference group.

Attorney Barnhart said that the disadvantage of the drys is financial. They cannot compete, he said, with the millions of dollars being spent by the wet interests.

"We will not participate in liquor control legislation," he said. "Experience has shown that there can't be any control. All regulatory laws have been ignored.

"There are two conflicting views of the wets—one that temperance will result from repeal, the other that tremendous governmental revenues will accrue. The latter argument means there will be a great deal more drinking. We are waiting to see what happens."

Comment of Mrs. McCulloch.

Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston, representative of the Woman's National Committee on Law Enforcement, remarked that the government is regulating every business and industry in the country except the liquor traffic.

"I am astounded that the liquor traffic is held to be so sacred by the government," she said. "Repeal of the prohibition law means, however, that we shall once again begin at the bottom as we did before. The W. C. T. U., of which I am a member, intends to put on a vigorous campaign for more members. We hope to double the membership this year, and we believe it will be doubled when people begin to see the number of drunken persons who already are beginning to reappear."

The Rev. Philip Yarrow, chairman of the commission on civic relations of the Chicago Church federation, said he would urge the re-establishment in churches of monthly Sunday school lessons teaching children and young people of the evils of alcoholic drink.

Alonzo E. Wilson of the American Business Men's Prohibition foundation declared that this organization will emphasize the argument for prohibition along economic lines.

DRUG STORES IN NEW YORK SELL WHISKY FREELY

Easy for the "Ailing" to Call Doctor.

It is possible today for an utter stranger to walk into almost any one of the 5,500 or more drug stores doing business within the city's limits and buy anywhere from a pint to a case of whisky at the prevailing trade prices and few or no questions asked. Most of the stores do not even bother to ask for a doctor's prescription, popularly supposed to be a prime requisite in the operation.

Some Sell Prescriptions.

Others have a supply of ready-made prescriptions on hand with which to go through the motion of fulfilling legal requirements and a scattered few, still prizing caution as the better part of enterprise, insist on sending the would-be purchaser upstairs or next door or across the street to get the little filled-in blank from an obliging doctor.

To all appearances, efforts at prohibition enforcement in this district which includes besides southern New York state, New Jersey, and Connecticut have been abandoned entirely. It was announced on the authority of the United States attorney's office. Some weeks ago in fact that no further prosecutions under the prohibition law were contemplated here "except at the sources of supply."

Seek Only Gangsters.

Attempts to padlock the average small speakeasy or prosecute retailers of liquor "unless the latter are gangsters or members of big bootleg syndicates" had been given up in view of the pronounced swing of popular sentiment against the prohibition law, it was said.

Apparently the druggists have taken the announcement at its face value and proceeded to go the limit. The manager of one well known drug store within a stone's throw of Broadway and Forty-second street told a CHICAGO TRIBUNE reporter today that he would undertake to buy a pint of liquor in the store of any competitor of his in the city without producing a prescription.

"Maybe some of them would insist on a prescription at first," he said, "but I could get it—by talking to the manager."

"Does that go for your own place?" he was asked.

Easy to Find Doctor.

Inquiry at another drug store a block away brought this statement from the young man behind the counter:

"Sorry, we can't accommodate you tonight, but if you will drop in tomorrow morning there's a doctor right across the street who will fix you up in short order."

Out in the residential districts, however, the word "prescription" has about been stricken from the drug store liquor clerk's vocabulary. All that is needed with him is the price of the goods—currently about $3.50 a pint. Introductions are accounted relics of a bygone age of prudery and the prospective customer is almost never asked to produce any evidence of identity or sincerity. Money talks here without any help whatever.

Chain Stores Busy.

This applies not only to the so-called neighborhood druggist, but to the chain store as well. The profits to be made from the newly opened field are apparently too easy to be passed up for whatever slight risk there may be in an open sales policy. One of the largest department stores of the city has a licensed doctor conveniently on the floor of its drug department to make out "rush order" prescriptions for the department's accelerated liquor trade traffic.

Under the revised federal liquor regulations promulgated some two months ago, drug stores are permited to sell a month's supply, not exceeding a case of whisky to a customer on a single prescription. Where the customer does not desire to take his full allotment at once, most stores have adopted an obliging policy under which the prescription may be "filed" and the liquor purchased bottle by bottle until the specified case limit is exhausted.

State Forgets Prohibition.

State authorities have made no efforts at prohibition enforcement here for years. When orders were issued reducing the federal enforcement personnel here last July, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman gave out a statement assuring all concerned that the instructions given to state agencies for enforcing the new beer sale regulations were not to be interpreted as a "drive on speakeasies." About the same time, Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the state alcoholic beverage control board let it be known that his department was "not at all interested" in liquor sales here or elsewhere in the state.

"The only thing that concerns us is to keep the sale of beer on a high scale" he said. "We are not interested in the liquor business."

Incidentally drug store liquor prices have risen from a third to 50 per cent here in the last sixty days. Liquor that formerly retailed over the pharmaceutical counter at $2 to $2.50 a pint now sells at $3.50 or more.

Danville, Ky., Oct. 8.—(AP)—John H. Walter Wallin, fireman, piloted the freight train into Danville after the shooting.

FISHING BOAT WITH 5 ABOARD MISSING IN LAKE

Whitefish Point, Mich., Oct. 8.—(AP)—A coast guard life boat commanded by Capt. William Kincaid put out today for Caribou Island, in Lake Superior, looking for the 75 foot steam fishing tug Search, of Kenosha, Wis., unreported since it left Grand Marais, Mich., Thursday on a fishing trip.

The tug, which carried five men, was expected back in Grand Marais Friday night or Saturday morning. Coast guardsmen expressed the belief it had encountered bad weather and had remained in the shelter of Caribou Island, which is about 46 miles from here. A high sea was running tonight, but until today no serious blows were reported on the lake.

The Search is owned by Chambers Bros., of Kenosha, and comes to Lake Superior each summer for the fishing season. It is commanded by Capt. James McDowell of Grand Marais. The Chambers brothers, another Kenosha man, and Carl Manila of Grand Marais, comprise the crew.

There are three men in the coast guard crew searching for the missing boat.

Owners Not Worried.

Kenosha, Wis., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Clifford Chambers, one of the owners of the steam fishing tug Search, unreported since leaving Grand Marais, Mich., last Thursday, expressed little concern for the craft tonight.

Five hundred former doughboys stood up and cheered him wildly.

URGE FREE SALE OF 3.2 BEER AND WINE IN SURVEY

Rockefeller Board Gives Temperance Advice.

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Removal of virtually all restrictions on the sale of 3.2 beer, and liberalization of any future regulations governing the sale of wine were recommended today in a further installment of the prohibition study sponsored by John D. Rockefeller Jr. as the most promising method of encouraging temperance after repeal.

Raymond B. Fosdick and Albert L. Scott, who conducted the study, urged that the sale of stronger drinks should be regulated in such fashion as to discourage consumption, and that a strict line should be drawn between the type of regulation applied to hard liquor and that applied to beverages of milder alcoholic content.

Recommendations of Report.

Discussing these points the report said:

"No one will deny that whisky and gin are more intoxicating that beer and wine. The argument for treating both classes of beverages alike in the past has been that the beer drinker of today becomes the whisky sot of tomorrow. There may be danger that this will occur if 3.2 per cent beer can be sold only over the same bar and subject to the same conditions as whisky.

"Since there is a greater profit in whisky, the barkeeper is under a constant temptation to push its sale. But we find no evidence to support the theory that satisfying a taste for beer develops a craving for whisky. On the contrary, we believe that if beers and wines are more easily obtainable than distilled liquors and are sold in different places and under different conditions, there is reasonable ground to expect that the taste of those who wish to drink will be diverted to the lighter and less harmful beverages.

Treated as Nonintoxicating.

"Every consideration of social control suggests the frank acceptance and treatment of beer containing not more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol as a nonintoxicating beverage. While this line may not be drawn with strict scientific accuracy, it has been popularly accepted as a result of the act of congress of March 22, 1933, permitting the sale of 3.2 per cent beer.

"The continued, unrestricted sale of beer having an alcoholic content of not more than 3.2 per cent is clearly the part of wisdom. Such beer should be obtainable by the bottle, for off premises consumption, practically without limitation. Its sale should be allowed by grocery stores, drug stores, delicatessens and general stores, and indeed by any merchant who so desires.

"A vendor's permit should be required, but the cost should be low, and there should be no restriction on the number of such permits. The sale of such beer by the glass, with or without meals, should be permitted in restaraunts, hotels, beer gardens, clubs, or indeed in any reputable establishment.

"Wines—naturally fermented—not in excess of, say, 10 to 12 per cent, should be sold by the bottle for off premises consumption as freely as 3.2 per cent beer. But as compared with 3.2 per cent beer, a greater measure of restriction should govern the sale of wine for on premises consumption. Natural wine should be sold by the glass only with meals. It follows that the sale of wine for on premises consumption should be restricted to bona fide restaurants, dining rooms and clubs."

Common Sense Liquor Control Is Advocated by Max Henius

Basing his conclusions on personal observations both in the United States and abroad, Max Henius, veteran president of the Wahl-Henius Brewing institute, issued a booklet yesterday urging that regulations for the sale of post-prohibition liquor be based largely on the attitude of the individual drinker.

"Since the law will permit the sale of alcoholic beverages, be they intoxicating or not," he said, "the individual must be allowed to judge for himself what he wants to drink and how much he wants to drink. The laws now on the statute books will take care of over-indulgence.

"My observations during twenty-five years with reference to the liquor situation in our country and abroad have convinced me that a system with sufficiently high taxation and common sense restrictions will give us the desired result, namely, true temperance enforced by the American people."

Lists Principles of Control.

Writing of the "American code," which he believes should be followed after repeal, Mr. Henius urged that the system of control be based on these principles:

"1. It must promote temperance.

"2. The manufacturing, wholesale and retail distribution and dispensing must be properly regulated by both the federal and state governments but with as few restrictions as possible on the individual. This also applies to the licenses to be issued by the cities, towns and villages."

"3. Federal and state taxes, which should be levied on a graduated scale based upon the alcoholic content of the beverages, should be within sane limits, thereby preventing illicit brewing, distilling, speakeasies, bootlegging and smuggling.

"4. No drinking bars should be permitted [in contradistinction to service bars and eating bars.]"

Urges State Liquor Board.

The pamphlet recommended the creation of a state liquor commission to control wholesale distribution and the issuance of dispensing licenses by ocal boards. It proposed several varieties of licenses, among them licenses for groceries and other stores selling liquor in original packages, and licenses for places that serve drinks.

Mr. Henius urged that there be no license fee in addition to a tax of $3.50 a barrel on beer containing not more than 3.2 per cent of alcohol by weight.

"Then," he said, "such beverages can be sold at 5 cents a glass and can be delivered to private homes at 75 cents a dozen 12 ounce bottles.

"They would then become the real national temperance beverage, sound and wholesome if properly brewed, and of the same quality as most of the beers now brewed on the continent of Europe. About 80 million barrels could be sold annually of a beer of this nature."

2 CLERKS AFRAID TO IDENTIFY A BANDIT SUSPECT

Two store clerks were afraid to identify a youthful bandit caught yesterday morning almost in the act of robbery, according to Sergt. John Hanrahan of the detective bureau. The prisoner said he was Eugene Iacovetti, 19 years old, 901 South Loomis street. When taken to the Isaac Ward clothing store at 210 South Halsted street, where he had been seized, he shook his fist at the two clerks and said, "You guys better not identify me or it will be just too bad."

Despite the fact that fifty suits of clothes were on the floor, where they were dropped by the robbers, and the admission by the clerks that there had been an attempted robbery, the clerks said they had never seen Iacovetti before. The clerks are Morris Hazen, 849 Barry avenue, and Samuel Rezman, 1301 South Keeler avenue. Police said they would be subpoenaed to appear before Judge Thomas A. Green in the Felony court.

Sergt. Hanrahan said he and his squad were driving by and saw a suspicious looking car in front of the clothing store. When they stopped a man at the wheel sounded his horn. Two men ran from the store and jumped in and the car got away. Hanrahan was in time to seize Iacovetti. The others escaped.

Describes Fearful Scene of City's Destruction.

Forty years ago today the following story of the great Chicago fire was printed in The Chicago Tribune. It was written by the late Joseph Medill, the editor. The occasion was Chicago day at the World's Columbian Exposition, Oct. 9, 1893, the 22d anniversary of the fire.

BY JOSEPH MEDILL.

About 11 o'clock at night [Sunday, Oct. 8, 1871] I was awakened by some member of my family—I was then living at Morgan and Washington streets—who reported there was a terrible fire to the south of our house. I jumped up and looked out of the window and saw the whole heavens to the east and south lighted up as if it were day.

I hastily dressed and started out to see the fire, never dreaming that it would cross the river. But, to my horror, when I got to Randolph and Canal streets the fire had already reached the river. I stood among a great crowd that filled the bridge to a dangerous extent, and saw the flames jump, with a bound as it were, in sheets across the stream a couple of blocks south and ignite frame buildings and sheds, and push their way rapidly to the northeast. While I stood there Madison street bridge was all in flames.

Roar Is Terrific.

I moved along Randolph street toward the courthouse and stopped on the north side of the courthouse, about where the old Metropolitan block stood, at the corner of Randolph and La Salle streets. I remained there in the crowd for a time, looking at the rush of the conflagration around the square.

The roar was terrific; the smoke drifted over me in huge volumes; sparks and pieces of burning wood were flying through the air by millions, and there was a strong wind blowing, apparently from every direction, into the fire; but the prevailing pressure was from the southwest.

While standing there I became alarmed about the Tribune building [then at Madison and Dearborn]. I found, however, that I could no longer reach it by moving eastward on Randolph street. I saw the eaves and belfry of the old courthouse catch fire, and city and county officers and police and many citizens were carrying out and trying to save in wagons and in their arms papers and documents. The jail was in the basement, and I heard a report that the jailer had opened the doors and let all the prisoners loose to prevent them perishing in the flames.

Light as Day at Midnight.

I went north on Clark to South Water street and then hurried east to State, and turned south to Madison, and thence to THE TRIBUNE building. It was then, I think, about 12:30 or 1 o'clock in the morning, but it was as light as day all over the city. The fire had apparently passed north of THE TRIBUNE at that time.

I found the printers at work setting up the report of the fire as far as it had been prepared, and learned that all the reporters were out getting fire news, and that the pressmen were ready to start up as soon as the forms were sent down. Everybody was as busy as a bee, and all were hopeful that the fire would not take our "fireproof" building.

Presently the fire began to increase to the west and south of us, and at 3 or 4 o'clock it must have swept Clark street as far south as Monroe or Adams against the wind. Then I began to have lively fears for the safety of THE TRIBUNE building and to organize a corps to make such defense as was possible.

Watches Blaze from Roof.

I had passed several hours on the roof, where I had a bird's-eye view of the ravages and spread of the flames. My associates, William Bross and Horace White, had all they could do to save their families and a few articles of value from their homes, and the fire came so near Mr. Cowles' house that neither he nor they remained at the office that night after 1 o'clock. My home was not in danger, being west of the fire.

We found a considerable quantity of water in the tanks on the upper floor of the Tribune building. Men were sent out to get buckets or anything that would hold water to throw on whatever might catch fire. Some shovels and buckets were procured in the pressroom. I concluded that the danger point was on the roof.

Suspicious of "Fireproof."

The "fireproof" cement material had been obtained in Cincinnati, and was warranted to resist 250 or 300 degrees of heat; but I had observed that in the hot summer days it was quite soft when I walked over it, I feared that it would ignite and burn up the building.

I got together fifteen or twenty men—printers and other employés—who volunteered to help save the roof. We had three or four shovels and some pieces of board to stamp out the fire whenever it caught, and some buckets of water. By this time thousands of sparks and bits of burning shingles were falling on the roof, and before sunup the roof had been on fire in many places.

We set to work stamping it out, some using boards, others shovels, and others threw on water, but it didn't seem to do much good, the "fireproof" roof was constantly catching here and there.

Blasts as from a Furnace.

The fire spread elsewhere with wonderful rapidity, surging about us to the west and north, leveling all the buildings in our front and along Dearborn street to the river and northeast, clearing everything to the lake north of Madison. The next I heard was the Grand Pacific hotel was burning—it was not completed at the time—and that the fire had enveloped everything on both sides of Madison and Monroe streets west of Dearborn as far as could be seen.

The air was like that of a furnace—fearfully hot. With the hot air, the stifling smoke, and a perfect storm of sparks and blazing fragments falling on THE TRIBUNE'S "fireproof" roof, we had a trying time in our efforts to extinguish the incipient fires all about us. There were half a dozen chimneys, and we would run behind these and stand with our backs against the east side to get a little air and recover from the effects of breathing smoke.

While there I saw the raging flames follow up the north branch, firing all the vessels and sweeping the north side. The view was perfect from the elevation I occupied. I saw fire break out in the neighborhood of the water works, and shortly afterward the news came that the water supply had been cut off; that there was no more pressure at the hydrants.

I saw thousands of people and vehicles of all kinds making their way toward the old cemetery at the head of Dearborn street. A lurid light illuminated the whole division and most of the frame houses were leveled to the ground. I saw great crowds, the fire having passed northwest of them, run to the water along the lake shore.

I could see people fleeing through the old cemetery northward. I saw the wooden palings around the graves on fire and also masses of furniture, bedding, and other property burn up.

A Frightful Sight.

Over all this terrible scene was a sullen roar, much like that one hears when close to Niagara falls, but mixed with crackling sounds and constant reverberations, loud as thunder, from falling walls and explosions, and I could see the great brick buildings tumbling and masses of flame thrown high in the air. It was an awful sight. From the whirling square miles of sparks and high rolling volumes of smoke and flame I observed that the demand for oxygen to sustain the mighty combustion was so enormous that there was an inrush of air from the southeast, and north and west, as well as from the southwest, the quarter whence the prevailing wind blew. It was a mighty furnace, and sucked in millions of cubic feet of air every minute to get the oxygen to burn up 14,000 houses in a few hours.

The crashing and noise, and smoke and flame, and the retreating of the people reminded me of the description of the battle of Waterloo and the rout and confusion of Napoleon's army when it gave way. Shot and shell could not have been louder or more terrific, and it was truly a question of sauve qui peut. Every one about me likened the awful scene to his fancy of the judgment day.

Battle with the Flames.

We would stay behind the chimneys until we could gain our breath, and then rush out with a board, or shovel, or whatever we had, and stamp away at a burning patch. Occasionally I left the roof in charge of Lieuts. Colbert and Kahler and ran downstairs to see how it was faring with the west front rooms. I had men in every room with water pails and wet cloths.

In some of the rooms the heat was so great that the glass in the windows was cracked in all directions and the varnish on the furniture smoked. The men ran around knocking over chairs, desks, and tables and throwing water on them or applying the wet cloths. We had closed all the iron shutters on the east, facing McVicker's theater, and on the south, fronting the court.

About 7 o'clock a pressman told me they had attempted to go to press, but the basement was so hot that the rollers had melted into a mass and nothing could be done with them; that there was so much smoke that the men could not live in the basement, and there was only water enough in the tank for a short run, the supply having been cut off by the burning of the water works. So the printing of any papers containing an account of the great fire had to be abandoned.

Continue to Battle Flames.

But we continued to make a fight on the roof and in the front rooms to prevent the fire from getting in through the west and north windows. About 8 o'clock some of the men came to me on the roof and told me that the fire had crossed Dearborn street, near Adams, and had also crossed State and was sweeping toward Michigan avenue and working south toward Van Buren street and north toward the Tribune building.

I ran down on hearing this, in order to ascertain its truth, as it was all important. I went through the alley between McVicker's theater and our office as far as Monroe or Adams—until I came near the fire. It was blazing in a dozen or twenty frame buildings in the rear of the brick ones facing Dearborn and State streets.

Forced to Give Up Fight.

There was a sea of fire south of me. I saw it was moving rapidly toward the lake and working northward, which would bring it in a few minutes to the rear of McVicker's theater, then to the Mackin building, and then to our building. So I went to the roof and told the men the battle was lost; that we could not save the Tribune block. They were more dead than alive, and in one sense glad to get the order to retreat.

Our faces were black. Our clothes had been on fire scores of times. Our hair and beards were singed. Our faces and hands were scorched and blistered. Even our shoes were burned from stamping on the spots of fire on the hot roof. We were a frightful looking set of fellows.

Going downstairs, we made a hasty search of the rooms and found some of the employés, entirely exhausted, lying in the eastern rooms, which were the coolest and least exposed.

Flee for Their Lives.

There was no time to coax a man to get up. He was violently "yanked," struck, and jerked to his feet and told to run for his life, as he would be burned if he remained there ten minutes longer. I think we got them all out.

Only one body was found in the basement, if I remember correctly, and that was of a man who had lain down on a bench under the sidewalk. He, however, was not an employé, but some poor fellow who had become exhausted and wandered in there and gone to sleep, being killed when a part of the north wall fell over.

When I got downstairs I thought I would make an effort to save the earlier files of THE TRIBUNE, and told the men to take only those prior to 1860, as I had a complete set in my house after that date.

Each one got two or three volumes out into the alley, but by that time the fire had so nearly surrounded us and the air was so full of sparks and flames that I saw if we carried the files they would catch fire and we would not be able to save them. So the books were dropped on the sidewalk and each of us started to get away as best we could.

Escapes Are Remarkable.

Some of the men ran west on Madison. How they ever got to the river alive I could never comprehend, as they hardly knew themselves. Others went across Madison street and took refuge behind a pile of bricks in the Dearborn school lot, where the Madison Street theater now stands.

They told me afterward that McVicker's theater burned about fifteen minutes after we left; that the west wall fell out against the east wall of the Tribune building, breaking the iron shutters and letting the fire into the different floors and basement.

In a short time the Tribune building resembled a volcano. But in the meantime the fire had crept up from the south on Dearborn and destroyed the adjoining and adjacent structures, so the Tribune building was the last to go in that part of the city.

Reach Lake and Safety.

The rest of us took Madison street east, holding our breath at the places where the fire had crossed and, running as fast as we could, reached the opening on the lake front. When we got there the fire was on Michigan avenue and was sweeping off the houses very rapidly between Van Buren and Madison streets. There I parted company with my comrades; we got separated in the crowd and confusion.

There were thousands of people and hundreds of teams on the avenue and everybody was making a desperate struggle to save some of his household goods. My brother, Sam, and I made our way south along the shore line (the street being utterly impassable) to Park row. We turned up Park row and got across the avenue and went to 12th street. Thence we traveled west and made our way home, reaching there between 9 and 10 o'clock.

We were more dead than alive. I took a cup of strong coffee as the best thing for an exhausted man, pulled off my boots, and threw myself on a bed. I fell asleep, but might as well have been awake on account of the rush of frightful dreams. I, however, rested for two hours.

Rents a Job Office.

Then I jumped up and had a hasty breakfast and while gathering up my thoughts of what should be done it occurred to me that there was a job [printing] office on the west side in the unburned district on Canal street, near Randolph, that had been used for getting out a city directory.

I hurried over there and began to search for the proprietors. In a short time an alleged one was found who claimed to own the property. I let him fix his own price on the material and, as he had a lease, I rented the premises then and there.

Before 2 o'clock I had possession of the quarters and of some vacant room adjoining. Unfortunately, there were no steam power presses nor engine and the type about the concern was chiefly caps and figures for printing directory names, but such as it was I was mighty glad to get it. I sent out word for our men to rally as fast as they could and shortly had my pressmen, printers, reporters, and everybody with THE TRIBUNE who could be found.

Finds Small Engine.

We presently discovered a small portable engine that belonged to somebody in the neighborhood and it was carted in and set up in the basement in a hurry. We got machinists to help us attach it to the press that was on the premises. We then heard of a Taylor press stored in an outbuilding or barn in the western portion of the city that belonged to a printer. We bought it and brought it in and set it up with the utmost rapidity.

We loaned our material, press, and rooms to the Journal people, whereby they were able to get out a paper Tuesday afternoon. We issued the first TRIBUNE the next morning. THE TRIBUNE and Journal worked in partnership for some time, we letting them have our machinery in the afternoon and working it at night ourselves.

Help from Cincinnati.

Mr. Halstead of the Cincinnati Commercial, divining the condition we were in, loaded up a lot of cases with type—an old font that he had boxed up and stored away—and then put them on an express train and, like a good Samaritan, came to our rescue. That well worn type looked new and beautiful to us, and we used it and his cases until we obtained a supply of new type elsewhere.

We heard that there was an idle four cylinder press in Baltimore that could be bought. We purchased it by telegraph at the party's own offer and gave orders to employ all the mechanics that could work at taking it down, and to put it on an express car. In a few hours it was on its way to Chicago, we paying express rates. The dimensions had been telegraphed, and we had the foundations ready when the press arrived.

In the meantime we had secured a more powerful boiler and bigger engine. In an almost inconceivably short time we had that four cylinder press up and going. We obtained from Milwaukee some type cases, chases, sticks, and materials of various kinds to get out our paper. We missed only one day after the fire. We indeed began printing that day, and if the water hadn't given out would have issued a 14-column account of the fire about 8 o'clock that Monday morning.

The Times was burned out in our neighborhood on Dearborn street, but Mr. Storey made no attempt to issue his paper. He took his time and a month or six weeks later built a temporary office on the west side and got out the Times some time in November.

Becomes Mayor of City.

From the day of the fire I worked 16 to 18 hours a day and had things in pretty good shape when I was snatched away and thrust into the mayor's office, much to my dislike and pecuniary loss.

On the anniversary of the great fire, one year thereafter, we were back on the old site with a full equipment, complete in all its details, in a new and better building—the present one.

The reconstruction was pushed through that winter. The remains of the old one down to the foundations were removed, and in the spring we brought the redstone for the fronts down from Lake Superior, got bricks wherever we could find them at any price, iron from Pittsburgh, glass from Paris, flooring tile from England, and other material from elsewhere and put up the structure at about double the cost of what a building of the same character could be erected for now. There it stands; that is its history; it speaks for itself.

The old building, which was supposed to be fireproof, was not insured. It was about as much "proof" as the others, but everything was combustible in that fire.

JARECKI OUTLINES BOND PLAN TO AID TAX DELINQUENTS

County Judge Jarecki yesterday outlined a plan by which the county and the owners of properties, which have been ordered into tax receiverships under the Kerner-Skarda act, can both benefit while the delinquent taxes are in collection. The plan involves the issuing of receivership certificates by County Treasurer McDonough for the full amount of the delinquent tax bills and the sale of these certificates to the public.

If the plan is found to be acceptable, the treasurer, who is receiver for more than 2,800 properties, would issue certificates for approximately $20,000,000, the aggregate tax bill owed by these properties.

"The certificates would be issued for the individual properties," Judge Jarecki explained, "and would bear 6 per cent interest. I think they would find a ready market because the public realizes that taxes are a prior lien on properties.

"The property owner would benefit because he would only be paying 6 per cent a year on the certificates, whereas his penalties on delinquent taxes are 1 per cent a month, or 12 per cent a year."

Judge Jarecki announced the plan after a discussion with Assistant State's Attorney Hayden N. Bell. Attorney Bell said that he would consult Attorney Henry Cutler, bond expert, as to its legality and practicality.

Sanitary District Awaits Details of U. S. Plan.

Legislative action to obtain the $120,000,000 loan of federal public works "easy money" to complete the sanitary district's program of sewage disposal plant construction will probably be deferred until the second special session of the legislature, it appeared yesterday.

There are no bills now pending before the present special session convened primarily for emergency relief legislation to enable the sanitary district to obtain the combined gift and loan, and it appeared doubtful whether they could be prepared before the legislators finish their relief program and go home. The present session will reconvene tomorrow.

Plans Second Session.

Fortunately, however, Gov. Horner has already stated that he intends to call a second special session shortly after the first is concluded, to pass on liquor control legislation and other emergency matters. It is expected that the sanitary district bill will be ready for that session, since the only obstacle to their preparation, attorneys for the district said yesterday, is that of time.

Attorneys for the public works administration will be in Chicago some time this week for a conference with the sanitary trustees and their legal staff, headed by Attorney William Rothmann. Out of this conference is expected to come a legislative program upon which the federal and local authorities agree.

Trustees Await Conference.

Mr. Rothmann said yesterday that the sanitary trustees have not been given definite word as to just what they must do, in the way of obtaining legislation, to get the federal money. That program, however, will probably be formed at this week's conference.

Gov. Horner anticipated possible action to help the sanitary district in issuing his call for the first special session. One of the sections in the call provides for enactment of legislation permitting political subdivisions of the state to lease, sell or convey their property for the purpose of building public works under the federal public works act.

Representative Schaefer O'Neill [Dem., Alton] has introduced a bill in the house permitting such action. The bill is sponsored by the Illinois Municipal league, an association of cities and villages, and is intended to apply to their local sewage treatment plants and water works for which they may wish to seek federal subsidies.

Wants District Excluded.

Samuel E. Weinshenker, assistant attorney for the sanitary district, said yesterday he will ask that the bill be amended to exclude the sanitary district of Chicago. It was drawn without consultation with the federal public works administration, and its provisions, he fears, might damage rather than help the Chicago board's loan application.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who administers the public works fund, has given assurance that the district can get $120,000,000 as soon as the legislature enacts the proper bills to make certain repayment of the money. The federal government would make an outright gift of $36,000,000, but would demand repayment of the remaining $84,000,000.

Secretary Ickes' Plan.

Secretary Ickes favors a plan under which the sanitary district would turn its sewage treatment plants over to a special federal corporation, created for the sole purpose of finishing them. That corporation would finish the work, spending the federal grant, and the district would lease the plants back and operate them at a rental which would eventually amortize the federal loan.

If the district gives the public works administration $84,000,000 of its bonds for the 70 per cent of the construction fund which it must repay, the total funded debt of Cook county would be increased by slightly more than 21 per cent. The major Cook county governments now have outstanding about $395,000,000 in bonds.

A supplementary application of the district for a loan of $7,874,477 is expected to be granted Wednesday, according to reports from Washington. The money will be used to finance construction work already contracted for but halted in February, 1932, because of lack of funds. More than 3,000 men will go back to work when this money is allotted the district, it was announced.

ICKES CALLS ON GOVERNORS FOR MORE ROAD JOBS

Seeks to Start 1,000 More Projects.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—In an effort to get a thousand federal aid highway projects under construction, and workers back on the pay rolls, Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes today telegraphed each state governor urging that contracts be let.

In his telegram Ickes pointed out that 2,160 road projects have been approved by his administration but that only 1,359 contracts have been let by the states and only 757 projects actually launched.

Should Have 1,000 More.

"On the basis of these figures," Ickes wired to the governors, "it would be possible throughout the nation to have 1,000 more highway projects under actual construction. Will you advise me what you can do to expedite this important work so that men can be put to work as soon as possible."

At the same time that Ickes sent his telegrams to all the governors, including Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, inquiry at the public works administration revealed that the administration itself is holding up work in Illinois.

Only 9 Projects Approved.

Although Illinois was allocated by congress more than 17½ million dollars out of the 400 million dollar road fund, the public works administration has approved only nine projects, releasing just $308,000, records of the administration show.

Ickes' telegram today was part of his campaign to jog up state and local authorities to whom public works funds have gone. Criticized for delay in achieving reemployment, with the 3 billion 300 million dollar easy money fund, Ickes has insisted that the lag is in the borrowing agencies and not in his administration.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Lupe Velez, Mexican pepperpot of the screen, and Johnny Weissmuller, known as the "human fish" in the swimming world, but as "Tarzan" to movie goers, came back to Los Angeles today after a hurried early morning trip to Las Vegas, Nev. There they obtained a marriage license.

Both denied with emphasis they were wed. Lupe said the marriage "might be tomorrow or three years from now." Inquiries of every justice of the peace and every clergyman in Las Vegas brought repeated denials that the ceremony had been performed.

Mrs. Dorothy Keeler, deputy county clerk at Las Vegas, said by long distance telephone she was routed out of bed and issued the license at 4:45 a. m. to Peter Weissmuller, 29, and Guadalupe Villa Lobos, 23, both of Los Angeles. Those are the legal names of the stars.

"All I can tell any one is that I issued the license to them," she said.

Lupe was reached at a Hollywood address, but said over the telephone she would not be "at home" to any one today.

"Yes, eet ees true Johnny and little Lupe got the marriage license," the actress admitted, "but we are not married. Make that a great big 'not married' please. When will we be married? I don't know. It may be next Tuesday; it may be three years. We sure don't know."

Weissmuller took up the receiver to add his denials.

Weissmuller was divorced one year ago by his first wife, Bobbe Arnst, dancer, on grounds of cruelty, but the interlocutory decree did not become final until last Friday.

Born in San Luis Potosi, Mexico, July 18, 1910, Miss Velez was educated in a Catholic convent in San Antonio, Tex. She was one of the "Wampas Stars" of 1928.

Cafe Bartender Surrenders After Shooting a Patron

Frank Alter, 33 years old, 1346 West 13th street, a bartender in the Oriental restaurant at 5[illegible] West 14th street, surrendered to the Maxwell street police yesterday after he had shot and wounded Thomas Hickey, 22 years old, 5436 Emerald avenue. Alter said Hickey and two companions entered the restaurant intoxicated and started a quarrel. One of the youths drew a revolver, he said, and he was forced to fire at them in self defense. Hickey was taken to the county hospital with a bullet wound in his neck. His companions fled.

MORRIS HILLQUIT, LEADER AMONG SOCIALISTS, DIES

Born in Russia; Came to U. S. in '86.

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Morris Hillquit, lawyer and internationally famous Socialist leader, died at his home here early today after a long illness. He was 64 years old. He was born in Riga, then a city of Russia, now the capital of Latvia, in 1869, coming to the United States with his parents in 1886.

Heads Socialist Committee.

Though one of the acknowledged leaders of American Socialism, he held no public office. He succeeded the late Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee in 1929 as chairman of the Socialist national executive committee. He was for twenty years general counsel of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union. In March of this year he expressed Socialist opposition to President Roosevelt's proposals for labor camps and proposed a "continental congress for economic reconstruction."

Hillquit had run on the Socialist ticket for mayor of New York in 1932, and ran unsuccessfully against former Mayor John F. Hylan in 1917, and declined the Socialist nomination for governor of New York and for state attorney general in 1934. He was a strong supporter of the late Senator La Follette's presidential efforts.

Praised by Gov. Lehman.

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee and Mrs. Hoan sent the Hillquit family a telegram of condolence today. Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York said of him today: "He was a man of rare intellectual attainments, of rugged honesty, and of great public spirit. Organized labor, as well as the entire community, has suffered a great loss in his passing."

Hillquit's last contest was at his party's presidential convention in 1932 at Milwaukee. He retained his chairmanship against a "left" wing faction that attacked him as a "New York Jew." Mayor Hoan was the opposing candidate for chairman.

"He was a splendid gentleman and a good citizen," Fiorello H. La Guardia, fusion nominee for mayor of New York City, said of Hillquit.

After Spinal Bone Graft He's Flown to Home Town

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Harry L. Magee, a carpet manufacturer, lying face downward in a specially constructed frame, was flown more than 100 miles to his home in Bloomsburg today after an operation at the Episcopal hospital. A piece of shin-bone was grafted to Mr. Magee's spine on Sept. 12. For more than three weeks he was kept immobile. Then he demanded that he be moved to his home, although he must remain in the frame for three months.

PERRY D. SMITH'S SON, 13, WOUNDED WHILE ON HIKE

Hamlin Dunlop Smith, 13 years old, son of Perry Dunlop Smith, headmaster of the exclusive North Shore Country Day school in Winnetka, was recovering in the Evanston hospital last night from a bullet wound in his left hand and a scratch from a bullet on his thigh. The Smith home is at 347 Forest avenue, Winnetka.

The wounds were incurred yesterday when the boy was walking through the Skokie marsh west of Winnetka with Robert Strong, 12 years old, 1377 Tower road, Winnetka, son of the late Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Chicago Daily News. The boys said the shots were fired by a stranger who was walking some distance from them.

GROCER ROUTS TWO BANDITS.

Two armed bandits who entered the grocery of Hyman Sterling, at 1400 North Maplewood avenue, Saturday night became panicky when he walked around the counter and fired several shots at him as they fled. Sterling was not wounded.

Road Network Would Cost $100,000,000.

to widen and improve 99 miles of public streets.

$8,000,000 of Funds a Year.

For the initial program of fifteen miles of elevated highway, the report points out that there is $8,000,000 a year available for road construction in Chicago from the city's and county's share of the gasoline tax revenue.

As a financial policy for this construction, the study recommends a "pay as you go" principle, with the users doing the paying through existing motor fuel taxes. The report goes into detail in opposing any special assessments or additional property taxes for the improvements, pointing out the inequity of many special assessments of the past.

On the design of the structures, several variations are suggested to meet special conditions. The type proposed as a standard for the Chicago system would be constructed in existing streets on a pavement supported by pillars. There would be four moving traffic lanes with provisions for adding two more lanes when more width is required.

Minimum of Delay.

The main argument advanced for this type of elevated highway is that it would involve a minimum of acquisition of private property for right of way, thus saving money and delays in construction. Figures were quoted to show that this would be less costly than a pavement on a sand fill between a retaining wall and an existing railroad embankment, a design which has been generally accepted as the most economical and feasible of elevated highway proposals.

The most novel feature of the proposed standard design— the feature that accounts for the record low estimates for elevated highway construction costs—is an open grid pavement of steel, of high strength and light weight. This pavement would be much lighter than the conventional concrete slab and the cost of foundations, pillars and other supports would be substantially lessened.

Other recommendations are cited for the steel grid. It would admit light and air to the street below. Without any maintenance, it would always be free from snow and ice. No drainage equipment would be necessary. The steel grid would afford far better traction than any conventional pavement, the survey declares.

Railings Three Feet High.

The outside railings of the pavement would be about three feet high with a gradual inside slope so that only the tire would touch if an automobile were driven too close to the side. A curb in the center would separate traffic bound in opposite directions.

The proposed lighting is as much of a novelty as the open grid pavement. Electric lamps would be sunk in the center curb with rays directed onto the pavement away from drivers' eyes. The outside railings would be used as reflectors to get a maximum of utility from every light.

Ramps would be provided at convenient intervals for entrance and exit from the structure. These would be one-way drives to insure a maximum of safety. At terminals or other places of heavy traffic, instead of widening a ramp, several of them would be built so as to distribute the vehicles on the ground level streets.

Approaching each ramp would be a special lane for acceleration or for deceleration so that the through traffic could maintain a speed of forty miles an hour, or higher, without interruption.

Cost $431,000 a Mile.

The cost of such structures is estimated at $431,000 a mile. This would provide for passenger cars only, and such is the recommendation of the Massen-McClintock survey. Providing for truck traffic, which constitutes only 10 per cent of the city's traffic, would increase the costs 50 per cent. The freighters would benefit, however, by removing passenger traffic from their surface routes.

This estimate of $431,000 per mile, the report points out, is only 15.5 per cent of the cost of equal traffic capacity gained in street widenings, as illustrated by the additional traffic lanes which were obtained in the Western avenue, Ashland avenue, and La Salle street improvements.

A comparison is also made of the cost of paving two parallel streets without widening to be used for one way traffic systems and it was found that the cost per mile of the elevated highway is only $92,208 more than one way surface pavement of equal traffic capacity.

For this $92,208 a mile the motorists are offered facilities that will cut travel time in half with safety. Studies indicate that 72 per cent of all accidents on surface routes would be physically impossible on the elevated highways.

Scenes of Many Deaths.

Chicago's widened streets have been the scenes of many pedestrian deaths. One out of every eight persons killed in traffic accidents in Chicago last year met his death in either Ashland or Western avenue. Of course, the elevated highways would be free from pedestrians and all cross traffic.

The trend in land values was studied to determine any benefits from widening other than those enjoyed by traffic. Figures were quoted to show that real estate prices on widened streets did not rise from their 1910 values as much as on similar streets not widened. Outstanding exceptions cited were Michigan avenue and La Salle street, where conditions peculiar to these thoroughfares brough about these exceptions.

The engineers were without precedents in calculating the effect of the elevated highways upon abutting property values, but they found that, contrary to popular belief, the values on streets occupied by the Chicago Rapid Transit company have maintained upward price curves with nearby streets.

Greatest Economic Benefits.

The program for initial construction is based on a thorough research to determine where expenditures would return the greatest economic benefits. It was found that the west side suffers more than any other section of the city from the delays and hazards of traffic congestion, that the northwest side ranks second and that the connection between Indianapolis boulevard and the outer drive is the third most important stumbling block in the city's transportation system.

For the highway due west from the loop, the broad market place in Randolph street, is recommended for an elevated highway. Here the standard open grid would be replaced with a concrete slab pavement to furnish shelter for the produce wagons that now use the street.

A temporary terminal at Ogden avenue would have connections with the one-way traffic system in Washington and Warren boulevards. For the continuation westerly, Dr. McClintock's engineers found that the Chicago Rapid Transit company's unprofitable structure in Lake street could easily be converted into an automobile highway. Presumably, the service now offered by the elevated railroad would be combined with the Chicago and North Western railroad's suburban service.

Policy on Construction.

The general policy for priority adopted by the report proposes construction of the routes to the west, northwest, and to the south progressively and simultaneously, but the study concludes that the Randolph-Lake route might advisedly be undertaken at once for its entirety since it would not be practical to take over one section of the elevated tracks at a time.

The initial five miles of the northwestern elevated highway, the report says, would draw traffic from Fullerton avenue, Diversey boulevard, Belmont avenue, Addison street, and Irving Park boulevard, attracting motorists who now use the lake front boulevards.

On the south side, an earth embankment, landscaped befitting its surroundings, would carry outer drive traffic through Jackson park onto an elevated structure in Stony Island avenue that would extend south to about 72d street.

Another section of this project would carry Indianapolis boulevard traffic from the state line to South Chicago avenue at 93d street on a combination trestle and embankment abutting railroad tracks. This would take through traffic from Jackson park drives and from the narrow and tortuous streets of the south side industrial district.

Sends Report to Mayor.

Ald. Massen, as chairman of the council traffic committee, addressed the report to Mayor Kelly, to Director Kingery of the state department of public works, and to Maj. Quinlan of the Cook county highway department, representatives of the three governmental units that are called upon to carry out the program.

The last regular session of the general assembly passed a bill directing the city, the county, and the state to collaborate in preparing a construction program for the metropolitan area, but Gov. Horner vetoed the bill with a statement that such collaboration did not require any new laws.

NEARLY 300,000 AT FAIR ON EVE OF CHICAGO DAY

Offer Varied Program to Lure City's Residents.

Saturday, Oct. 7, 1933.....	249,702
Saturday, Oct. 7, 1893.....	222,382
Total, including Oct. 7, 1933 [134 days] 18,440,955
Total, including Oct. 7, 1893 [160 days] 15,764,231

The Columbian Exposition opened May 1; A Century of Progress opened May 27.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Chicagoans—more than 250,000 of them—visited the World's Fair yesterday, giving hope to officials that they would attend in even greater numbers today in observance of Chicago day.

The total paid attendance up to 11:30 o'clock last night was 296,265, the second largest recorded thus far. The largest was 367,004, registered on Sept. 3. Yesterday's attendance was roughly divided into local and out of town visitors, it being estimated there were more than 250,000 Chicagoans and around 40,000 non-Chicagoans at the Fair.

How large an outpouring will be attracted to the Exposition today no one would predict. Yesterday's turnout convinced officials, however, that the Sept. 3 record might be broken, especially if the weather is good. It is not generally predicted that the total of 716,881 recorded on Chicago day at the Fair of 1893 will be equaled, although some observers hold that figure might be closely approached. To get as large an attendance as possible, all Chicago is being asked to visit the Fair, if even for only an hour, to show their respects to Chicago and the special day set aside in its honor.

Only 23 More Days Remain in Which to See the Fair

Anniversary of City's Rebirth.

The day has a dual purpose. It honors the city which made the Exposition dream a reality. It commemorates the historic burning of Chicago, from which the city rose to its present importance in the world. Today is the birthday of the city, not commemorating its settlement, or its incorporation, but its rebirth from the ashes of a disastrous fire. It is the birthday of modern Chicago.

Mayor Kelly has proclaimed today a holiday for Chicago, closing all but the essential municipal offices, and urging all of Chicago to attend the Fair. The public schools will close at noon. The historical significance of the day, the holiday features, and the colorful program are expected to draw a throng equal to if not greater than that of yesterday.

Army Parade to Start Program.

Today's festivities will open in the Court of Honor at 1:30 p. m. with a military parade and a reception in honor of Mayor Kelly. Troops from Camp John Whistler will pass in review before the mayor and Gov. Henry Horner, a native Chicagoan and also an honor guest of the day.

From the Court of Honor the parade will move to the court of the Hall of Science, where a formal program will be presented from 2 to 4 p. m. Leading the parade and taking a prominent part in the activities of the day will be the United States marine corps band, brought to Chicago especially for Chicago week at the Fair. Speakers at the ceremony will include Mayor Kelly, Gov. Horner, and President Dawes of the Fair.

As a special show for the Chicago visitors and as an expression of thanks to them for the patronage of the last week, the second rario revue of the Fair will be staged at 2:30 p. m. in the Court of States. The popular acclaim of the first revue staged Friday night caused the Fair to stage this afternoon's show, larger than the first, as a special feature of Chicago day.

Noted Artists to Appear.

Among the artists who will appear at the revue are Phil Baker, Bernie Cummins and orchestra, Tony Cabooch, Benny Meroff and orchestra, the Singing Lady, Grace Wilson, the King's Jesters, Mark Fisher and orchestra, Olson and Johnson, Quin Ryan and his Scalawags, Jan Garber and orchestra, Irene Beasley, the Cadets, Barn Dance troupe, Myrt and Marge, Uncle Bob, Thora Martens, Sinclair minstrels, Irene Rich, Tom, Dick and Harry, and Charlie Agnew and his orchestra.

The entire show is free and seats for 30,000 persons are provided in the spacious Court of States. A wide balcony surrounding the court will give additional thousands a chance to watch the performances of the stars they have heard over the air.

Three other programs of high interest to Chicago visitors will be presented during the day. The Mexico City Tipica Police band will give three concerts, at 3 p. m. on the Floating theater, at 8 p. m. in the Court of States, and at 10:30 p. m. on the board walk of the North lagoon, where they will alternate with the marine band.

National Groups to Repeat Show.

Seventeen national groups, all in costume, will present a show of folk dances and folk songs between 8 and 10 p. m. in the court of the Hall of Science. Vaudeville shows will be presented on the Floating theater at 6:30 and 9 p. m.

The religious significance of the day has not been lost sight of. Services will be conducted at 11 a. m. in the court of the Hall of Science. Some of the most renowned ministers of the city will conduct the services.

Ideal weather for Fair going and the observance of Father Marquette day, honoring the intrepid Jesuit explorer, who made the first settlement on the site of Chicago, yesterday did much to attract the record breaking attendance. But more than that, the admission figure indicated clearly that Chicago has taken over the Fair. A majority of yesterday's crowds consisted of Chicagoans.

The Marquette program was held in the court of the Hall of Science, with the Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, president of Loyola university, as the principal speaker. Other speakers included Mayor Kelly and Quin O'Brien. The speakers dwelt on the significance of the visit of the missionary father and traced the history of Chicago since that historic event.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Frances Perkins, secretary of labor in the cabinet of President Roosevelt, will arrive in Chicago next Saturday to address the Illinois League of Women Voters at the Fair. She will receive a cabinet member's salute of nineteen guns and a military review on her arrival.

The flag of the President of the United States, which was flown from the Administration building of the 1893 Fair at the time President Grover Cleveland opened the Exposition, will be raised at A Century of Progress Exposition Wednesday as one of the features of Columbian Exposition day. The flag is now the property of Western Reserve academy, Hudson, O., and was loaned to the Fair for the one day appearance. Capt. James Hunt, who was in charge of flags of the 1893 Fair, will raise the standard to the mast head in the court of the Hall of Science.

The A. & P. carnival reported the second largest day's attendance yesterday, when 164,139 persons had passed through its gates by 9:30 o'clock in the evening, or over half of the number attending the Fair during the day. The largest day recorded by the A. & P. carnival was on Sept. 3, with an attendance of 184,203.

Marie Anderson of Chicago will be crowned Fur Queen in a ceremony on the Floating theater today at 1:30 p. m. After the coronation a revue of the latest styles in furs will be staged by some twenty models.

Miss Jean Masek, soprano who won second place in the Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, will make her debut before the footlights tomorrow afternoon in a vaudeville program on the Floating theater at 2:30 p. m. She has sung on several radio programs since the festival in Soldiers' field.

Eugenio Croizet will begin a series of daily art lectures at 9:30 o'clock tonight in the Italian pavilion. His talks, designed to show the human interest side of art, will be illustrated with slides in color.

Miss Dorothy Budde, queen of the Quincy, Ill., fall celebration, arrived in Chicago yesterday for a visit to the Fair. She was accompanied by Miss Blanche Musser of La Grange, Mo., and Miss Kathleen Robertson of Mendon, Ill., her two princess escorts.

The New York Central lines reported the use of 23 extra sections of regular trains over their lines yesterday in bringing nearly 8,000 visitors to Chicago and the Fair. The Exposition Flyer of the Michigan Central was operated in eight sections, and two special trains brought visitors from Pittsburgh.

STATE ST. GLOWS WITH PRIDE ON 100TH BIRTHDAY

Week of Pageantry to Open Today.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Aglitter with merchandise from the four corners of the world, aglow with the sense of drama a hundred years have wrought, State street this morning launches a week of fiesta to commemorate its present, prideful status among the famed thoroughfares of the world, and to blend with the observance of Chicago week at A Century of Progress Exposition. Both pageantry and profit await the shopping thousands due to invade the loop during the week, for State street is an experienced and a successful host.

A century ago there was no hint of its future as the central business artery of that "little upstart village" disdainfully referred to by the noted English traveler of the era, Charles S. Latrobe. But the obscure trail had just been labeled State street, and its residents in their rude, hastily erected cabins were properly impressed with the expanding importance of their avenue in the booming frontier settlement.

Its Appearance in '30s.

Its dismal appearance in the '30s, when Chicago had assumed the classification of a town, is graphically told by John Bates, a settler, in an interview of the date of 1833.

"Up and down Water street, between State and Wells streets, all the business houses and stores were built in 1833," he related. "Also nearly all the cabins for dwellings. You could, from every store and dwelling, look north across the river, as there were no buildings on what is now the north side of the street.

At that time a slough emptied into the river at State street, and was a sort of bayou of dead water through which scows could be run up as far as Randolph street, near the corner of Dearborn, and there was a dry creek up as far as where the Sherman House now stands."

It was in September of 1833 that Latrobe arrived in Chicago during the vivid, chaotic days when the Indians had encamped around the town awaiting a settlement from the whites who had opened up their lands to further colonization and pushed back the red nations to the lands of the west.

Night and day, Latrobe recounts, the babel was incessant. The Indians "howled, sang, wept, yelled and whooped" in their various camps night after night and day after day, as the conference was postponed on the plea that some important chieftain could not attend, or the sky was cloudy and not propitious for the transacting of business.

Chicago Boasts Four Inns.

The pony express was bringing in the mail at that time. Chicago boasted four inns, the Wolf Point tavern; the Sauganash, operated by Mark Beaubien; the Green Tree tavern, just built by James Kinzie, and the Mansion House, an unpretentious log cabin, kept by Dexter Graves. The land boom was just starting that was to skyrocket real estate values in two years from $62 to $96,700 for one lot. There was no fresh water, and the drinking supply was peddled from door to door in carts stocked from the lake.

Relics and reproductions of scenes of those historic days will be found in the big establishments that have built the reputation of State street, when the celebration is opened this morning. Special sales events have been scheduled everywhere, and fashion parades contrasting the clothes of 1833 and 1933 will be frequent.

Street to Have Birthday Cake.

One feature of the week will occur at noon Wednesday, when a mammoth birthday cake with 100 four foot tapers, will be wheeled into position at the "busiest corner in the world," State and Madison. Police, both afoot and mounted, will form a quadrangle about the truck on which it stands, and a brief program of addresses on the significance of the observance will be given by Gov. Horner or his representative, Mayor Kelly, Gordon Strong, chairman of the board of the State street council, and Walter Gregory, president of that organization.

Surrounding the cake will be a coterie of veterans who have been employed on State street since 1893, with a number among them whose span of service goes back years before that. A quartet of attractive girls will be stationed at the four corners of the cake, and as the ceremony ends another will break through the frosting from inside, to represent the spirit of State street.

Those pioneers who first saw the possibilities of State street, and laid the basis of its present importance by establishing business houses there, will be honored with a few moments of silent recollection.

CITY GETS NEW FLAG TODAY WITH THIRD STAR FOR 1933 FAIR

Chicago today will receive a new flag. The presentation at the World's Fair by Mayor Kelly to Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Fair, will be a feature of Chicago day. The new flag will carry a third red star, bringing the banner up to date. The official flag, designed in 1917 by Wallace Rice, has three white stripes, two blue stripes, and two red stars. The white stripes signify the three sides of Chicago, the blue stripes the two branches of the Chicago river, and the two stars the major events which have had a part in the shaping of Chicago's destinies—the fire of 1871 and the Fair of 1893. The third star will commemorate the 1933 Fair.

ATTACKS DELAY IN U. S. APPROVAL OF MILK PACTS

Administrators of the agricultural adjustment act were criticized yesterday for their tardiness in approving milk marketing agreements throughout the country by Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers' federation. It opens a three day convention today at the Morrison hotel.

"There is great disappointment among the farmers and dairy cooperative leaders over the marketing agreement policies of the administration and the slowness with which these agreements are getting approval from the A. A. A.," said Mr. Holman.

"Although the act was signed May 12, and more than 125 applications for dairy marketing agreements have been filed after nearly five months, agreements have been signed for only five milk markets."

Chester C. Davis, director of production control for the A. A. A. administration, and Dr. Clyde L. King, chief of its dairy section, will speak before the 1,000 delegates to the convention today.

SPAIN DISSOLVES CONGRESS TO END POLITICAL CRISIS

Coalition Cabinet Picked by New Premier.

MADRID, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The constitutional congress was dissolved today as Martinez Barrios, the new premier, announced the personnel of the republican coalition cabinet he succeeded in forming after Spain's most confused governmental crisis since the inception of the republic.

Omitting the Socialists, the ministry included a number of holdovers from that of Alejandro Lerroux, who precipitated six days of frenzied negotiations by resigning last Tuesday.

Silences Objections.

The former premier, as leader of the radical republicans, said, "The new government was formed with my consent and approval," thus silencing objections to the change by one sector of the party.

The Socialists who opposed the dissolution of congress, went into session to determine their policy in the forthcoming election.

Conservatives expressed dissatisfaction because "the cabinet lacks sufficient experienced personalities." Barrios announced the group will meet tomorrow morning at the palace under the chairmanship of President Alcala Zamora.

The solution ended a political impasse that threatened to involve the country in its most serious trouble since the abdication of King Alfonso.

Chaos Is Avoided.

The days of bitter controversy were climaxed by a dispute between Lerroux and former Premier Manuel Azana, whom he characterized as a "man without a heart." Last night, however, Azana persuaded Lerroux to relinquish his long stubborn stand against the Socialists, which seemed to be bringing Spain to the verge of political chaos.

The leader's agreement to permit radical republican coöperation with the Socialists cleared the air and republicans throughout the country rejoiced over the compromise. Although the Socialists later refused to take part in the government on constitutional grounds, the gesture consolidated hitherto clashing republican groups to such an extent that a measure of coöperation was expected during the delicate elections times.

Since its ceremonious opening July 14, 1931, the legislators have drawn up one of the most liberal and progressive constitutions in existence.

Their difficult task involved breaking century old traditions and customs to meet the necessities of a republic raised on the ruins of the most nearly absolute monarchy of modern times.

Barrios Is Fourth Premier.

Barrios becomes the fourth premier since the republic was founded. Zamora, now president, was the first, resigning over a religious article in the constitution. He was succeeded by Azana, who held the post until last Sept. 8. Lerroux then led the government for a month.

Lerroux denied that he felt any bitterness in handing over the reins of government to Barrios.

"That's nothing more than a political incident," he said.

"The new government was formed with my consent and approval," he declared. "I shall continue guiding the radical republican policy and if it comes to pass the radical republican policies cannot be properly exercised under the new régime then we shall take steps to force its resignation."

Crowds Outside Building.

The Socialist refusal to participate was based on their interpretation of article 75 of the constitution. It came after an all night session during which their rôle remained a matter of doubt to large crowds gathered around the congress building, awaiting news.

Congress was practically deserted today compared with the hectic night long confusion.

FIND MISSING MAN'S BODY.

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 8.—(Special.)—The body of Frank Entringer, 63, missing from his home here for three days, was found today in the woods near Rickardsville. The cause of his death is a mystery, officials said.

MUSSOLINI ASSERTS OLD IDEAS OF LIBERAL CAPITALISM MUST GO

ROME, Oct. 8.—(AP)—An interview with Premier Mussolini published in the Echo de Paris in which he was quoted as saying that it is necessary to finish with the old ideas of liberal capitalism was read today with considerable interest by the Italian public. It was reproduced in all Italian newspapers.

Observers commented that Il Duce's declaration was not directed against capitalism itself, since he said several times that he is determined to support private capitalism, but at the same time to regulate it within the corporative state.

His statements are regarded as representing an exposition of the latest development in the Fascist corporative state—corporations of category. These consist of employers and employés of each branch of industry, commerce, transportation, and agriculture, who are to settle the questions of wages, hours, and conditions within the corporation itself instead of appealing to the national council of corporations as they have previously. The corporations of category will begin operations about Jan. 1.

SOVIET 'HANDOUT' BARES JAP PLOT TO SEIZE RAILWAY

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The soviet government officially made public tonight what it claimed to be four official Japanese documents purporting to reveal the activity of the Japanese civil and military administration in Manchukuo in furthering a plan to seize the Chinese Eastern railway.

The documents consisted of three alleged communications from Japanese Ambassador Hisikari in Manchukuo to the foreign minister at Tokio. One was dated Sept. 4, two were dated Sept. 9, and another was from the Japanese consul general at Harbin to Ambassador Hisikiri, dated Sept. 19.

They supposedly chronicled plans made in conferences among high Japanese officials in Manchukuo for exerting pressure on negotiations in Tokio for the sale of the railroad. The alleged plans included the arrest of six responsible soviet officials of the railroad—who now are actually in confinement—in furtherance of what the soviet government charges was a Japanese plot gradually to deprive the soviets of any power in the management of the line.

ANCONA, Italy, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A new air speed record over a 100 kilometer course [about 62 miles] of 393.33 miles per hour was established by Lieut. Col. Guglielmo Cassinelli, officials reported today. The flyer is second in command of the high speed school at Desenzano, where Lieut. Francesco Agello last spring made a world record of 426½ miles per hour on a five lap course. Officials said Cassinelli broke a record held by British Flying Officer J. N. Boothman for the same length course of 342.8 miles per hour.

QUITO, Ecuador, Oct. 8.—(AP)—President Martinez Mera completed formation of his cabinet today. The newly announced portfolios were: Government, Luis Enrique Escudero; instruction, Caton Cardenas; finance, Alfredo Espinoza; war and navy, Juan Francisco Anda. The senate will meet Tuesday to make formal charges against the president, who has repeatedly refused congressional demands that he resign.

HEAD OF CUBAN ARMY PREPARES TO NIP 'REVOLT'

Fear New Uprising; Troops Massed in Forts.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 8.—While Cuba today was in an attitude of waiting for the next revolution in the 1933 series, Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army, was planning to scotch it before it gets started.

On the surface, affairs appear tranquil after the battle of the National hotel and the demi-hurricane of last week, but beneath it all the counter revolutionary groups are still seething and reports persist that the next few days may see another attempted coup.

Snipe from Housetops.

Occasional sniping from the housetops was heard last night, but no casualties were reported. Soldiers, who have patrolled the streets of Havana for the last two months, were absent from the streets last night. This was an apparent move to discourage sniping by giving no targets to the snipers who have been specializing on the military. The soldiers were massed in the forts.

The police force, which is now under a military regime, appeared able to maintain peace and order in the capital today. Early in the morning a swarm of rumors appeared that Santiago would be the scene of the revolt today, but word from that city this evening was that everything is quiet.

More conferences are reported under way with a view of creating a coalition cabinet with Grau San Martin to remain as president. But the counter revolutionary groups were reported as sticking to their old proposition of two weeks ago that as the first condition of any coalition government Grau should resign. This evening negotiations seemed to have trotted around the old circle again.

Cheer Camera Man's Departure.

The chief event in Havana this afternoon was the departure of Joseph Gibson, American camera man for the Universal Newsreel service, who was shot in the battle of soldiers against communists on "red Friday" nine days ago. A cheering crowd went to the water front to see him board a plane for Miami. A ten piece orchestra from the Plaza hotel sped him on the way to the tune of "Sidewalks of New York" and "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Gibson, who still has several bullets embedded in his legs, was carried to the plane on the shoulders of twelve camera men. The news reels have had their crack specialists here for the revolution series and a celebration was staged at the landing. Gibson was shot while taking pictures from the roof garden of the Isla de Cuba hotel and the camera men say the shots came from snipers above them and not from soldiers.

Tuesday is a national holiday, Oct. 10 being the anniversary of the "grito de Yara," or battle cry of Yara—the name of a small town in Oriente province—which marked the beginning of the so-called ten years' war in 1868.

De Cespedes "Father of Cuba."

Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, known as the "father of Cuba," was the leader of that unsuccessful movement to overthrow the Spanish rule. He was the father of the De Cespedes who became provisional president on Aug. 12 after Gerardo Machado fled, but he was pushed out by the junta after 23 days in office.

Whether the counter revolutionaries would try to start something on the national holiday is a question. Two years ago revolutionists planned to start a revolt on May 20, which is Cuba's Fourth of July, but postponed it. Tuesday the usual military review, fireworks and dances in illuminated streets are expected to be dispensed with, due to the unsettled situation.

Williams, director of the public safety division of the National Safety council; Lieut. Herbert McKaska of the Detroit police department; Capt. Lawrence A. 400 RECRUITS SIGN DAILY FOR FOREST ARMY

Enlistment of new recruits for the civilian conservation corps was under way yesterday at Fort Sheridan following the word received on Saturday by Brig. Gen. Frank C. Bolles, commandant of Fort Sheridan, from Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth Corps area, that Fort Sheridan's quota for reënlistment in the reforestation army for the next six months would be 12,000 men. The first six month period was completed on Oct. 1 and the new forest army must be in work camps by Dec. 1, it was announced.

Jobless men have been enrolling at the rate of 300 and 400 a day since Oct. 2 and so far only 2,850 of the new quota have signed up. President Roosevelt's offer of reënlistment to those members of the conservation corps who have been unable to find jobs has been accepted by great numbers of the men already enlisted. The exact number of the 17,000 men sent out to forest camps from this area who will reënlist has not been determined.

Thousands Returning to Jobs.

Thousands of men who were detailed to camps on the west coast have secured jobs under the NRA or for other reasons and are returning to their homes, being sent to Fort Sheridan for demobilization under the supervision of Gen. Bolles. Carloads of these men are detraining every day at the fort, where they are given a thorough physical examination and their equipment is checked. Each man is permitted to keep one uniform, and is given his pay check and transportation home. Approximately 4,500 of these men will be in their homes by Oct. 12 and the registration of the contingent for winter duty will be rushed ahead to fill their places.

Start Barracks Today.

"Many of these fellows who were jobless and dejected in heart and spirit when they were sent out to the camps have returned in perfect health and with new hopes and a new outlook on life," Gen. Bolles said yesterday. "They are happy, tanned, and muscular and will enter their new employment with a vigor they thought they had lost before."

Seven hundred men, under the direction of Thomas B. McCarron, executive CCC officer in charge of the work camp in Skokie valley, will begin work today on permanent barracks on Harms avenue, between Glenview road and Lake avenue, where the men, who have been living in tents this summer, will be housed during the winter. Preparations are now under way to double the number of men in this camp, which now consists of five companies of 230 men each.

TRADE CONTROL EXPENSES ITEM IN LIVING COSTS

Mounting Tax Bills Are in Prospect.

Executives Crowd Capital.

Code making has required not only the establishment of trade associations headquarters here but the presence in Washington of the chief officers and the counsel of every important business concern in the country. For more than two months the Washington hotels have been jammed with thousands of business executives compelled to spend anywhere from one to ten days at hearings on codes and in negotiations with Gen. Johnson and deputy administrators. It has been a luscious windfall for the hotels nearly all of which are in the hands of receivers but not for much longer, it would appear.

The hotels are profiting not only from the patronage of thousands of business men but from the provision of quarters for the hearings conducted by the NRA on codes. Despite the enormous increase of government office space under the Hoover administration in the huge new commerce department building and other structures there is not room enough in government buildings to accommodate the sessions on the formulation of codes. It has been necessary for the government to obtain additional accommodation in the hotels.

"Code Experts" Appear.

One of the most illuminating sidelights on the new order of planned industrial economy is the appearance of the "code expert." The sign is beginning to appear on scores of office doors. To guide him through the mazes of code making and code administering, the business man needs, or is supposed to need, the services of a code expert as much as a citizen with an ax to grind with a Democratic official needs the services of a Democratic law firm.

Now, to pay increased dues to the greater and grander trade association, to travel to and from Washington, to stop at a Washington hotel anywhere, from one to ten days, to pay the retainers and expenses of counsel, to bring along one or more subordinates and other advisers, to hire code experts and to do more or less entertaining, perhaps, of NRA officers and employes—all of this is costing every business enterprise thousands of dollars and is going down on its books as an additional expense increasing the cost of production and boosting the price of its commodity.

ASHES OF INVENTOR CONSIGNED TO WINDS FROM AN AIRPLANE

Cleveland, O., Oct. 8.—(AP)—An airplane today consigned to the winds the ashes of Charles E. Thompson, famous automotive inventor, who died last week.

In accordance with the last request of the man who perfected valves for high speed internal combustion engines, his ashes were sifted over the center of Cleveland by Maj. James H. Doolittle, famous flyer and close friend of the dead industrialist.

With Doolittle in his plane were two children of Thompson, Mrs. Phillip Farley of New York, and Howard Thompson, and two business associates.

Three Ohio National Guard planes formed an escort as Doolittle's plane circled over the Thompson residence and factories, dropping flowers.

Then the aerial cortége flew over the center of the city Thompson loved and where he gained fame. While the planes circled slowly the ashes were released from a small urn by Doolittle.

Funeral services were held yesterday at St. Paul's Episcopal church.

SUNDAY CLUB IS CONGRATULATED BY ROOSEVELT

Congratulations from President Roosevelt on its twenty-seven years of existence were read last night to the members of the Chicago Sunday Evening club by Clifford W. Barnes, founder of the club, at its meeting in Orchestra hall.

Mr. Barnes, who organized the club in February, 1908, with the aid of prominent business men, celebrated his 69th birthday yesterday by presiding as usual over the meeting.

The message from the President follows:

"It is with very real pleasure that I send my greetings to the Chicago Sunday Evening club as it opens its twenty-seventh season. The broad and wholesome religious faith which statesmen and ministers of all denominations have expressed at the meetings of the club, through all these years, is one of the chief factors which make possible an unselfish movement like the NRA, and which gives us reason to hope that a better day for our country is near at hand."

The meeting was addressed by Bishop William F. McDowell of the Methodist Episcopal church, who spoke on the subject, "The City Four Square."

New Congresswoman Visits Daughter Here

Mrs. Isabella Greenway, recently elected to congress from Arizona to succeed Lewis Douglas, now director of the budget, arrived in Chicago yesterday on her way to begin her term in Washington. She was accompanied from her home at Phoenix, Ariz., by her young son, John, and was met at the Englewood station by her daughter, Mrs. Charles Breasted Jr. Yesterday she and John spent at the Breasted home at 5807 Dorchester avenue and will continue their journey today.

LEIF ERICSON MEMORIAL SITE IS DEDICATED

Mayor Kelly yesterday formally opened the extension of Leif Ericson drive between Jackson boulevard and Randolph street, and dedicated the site of the Leif Ericson memorial in Grant park. Three thousand Chicagoans of Norwegian descent participated in the ceremonies.

Members of the forty-two organizations composing the Norwegian League of Chicago, headed by the band of the Logan Square post, No. 405, of the American Legion, paraded from the Naval armory at the foot of Randolph street to the site of the memorial at Monroe street and Leif Ericson drive. The Norwegian Singers' League of Chicago, under the direction of Knut Hansen, gave an introductory program of Viking songs.

Christian Olsen, president of the Norwegian league and chairman of the memorial committee, then introduced Mayor Kelly, who sketched the historical background of Ericson's life.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—Fresh attempts to unsnarl the long badly tangled commercial relations between Germany and Poland will be initiated tomorrow with simultaneous negotiations here and in Warsaw. The commercial treaty negotiated between the two countries in 1930 has never been ratified, and as a result both governments have been carrying on a tariff war that began in 1919.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO WIN THE WORLD SERIES

(Left) "I LONG AGO learned that Camels are the cigarette for me," says "Blondy" Ryan. "I like Camels better, and they don't get on my nerves."

(Above) HAROLD SCHUMACHER SAYS: "I prefer Camels. I am a steady smoker of Camels and they never give me jumpy nerves or a 'cigaretty' aftertaste."

WELL THE RETURNS ARE IN. Congratulations to the new World Champions—the Giants! Rated by the experts as a hopeless contender this amazing team, playing under inspired leadership, fought successfully through one of the hardest National League races in years . . . and, again the under dog, went on to win the World Series.

It takes healthy nerves to play "better baseball than you know how."

It takes healthy nerves to go on winning day after day through crucial series after series . . . delivering time after time in the pinches.

It means something when you discover that 21 out of the 23 Giants smoke Camel cigarettes. These men, to whom healthy nerves are all-important, have found that Camel's costlier tobaccos not only taste better, but also they never interfere with training . . . never jangle the nerves.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Fugitive Confident He'll Escape Extradition.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Oct. 8.—Samuel Insull will appear before the Greek Court of Appeals Thursday morning for a hearing of extradition charges in connection with the alleged fraudulent bankruptcy of several of his utilities companies, it was learned today.

Insull's hearing thus falls on the anniversary of his first arrest and detention in Greece a year ago when he was charged with larceny and embezzlement. He has been under arrest in the present case since Aug. 26.

Court Gets Papers Tomorrow.

Documentary proofs submitted by the American department of justice have been studied by the defense and Prosecutor Anthony Reganakos of the Greek court during the last two weeks. The documents will be sent to the court Tuesday evening and the hearing will be set within 24 hours in conformance with Greek law.

Legal circles tonight are interested in knowing whether the Insull lawyers will be able to spring a bombshell as they did last year and get their aged client off. The affidavit of Floyd Thompson, former Illinois Supreme court judge, declaring that Insull's action was merely bookkeeping, gave the former Chicago magnate his liberty last year in the opinion of legal circles here. It is now wondered whether a similar last minute coup has been prepared this year. Mr. Thompson is now employed by Insull interests in Chicago, it is understood here.

Anyway, Insull's confident attitude on the eve of the hearing indicates he has a strong defense prepared. Observers say it would be erroneous for the American public to be optimistic about the Greek court issuing an extradition order.

Woman Visits Insull.

Insull today received visitors at the hospital where he is confined. He was cheerful and chatty. Mrs. Kouryoumdjoglou, pretty Greek woman, spent much of the day at his side. Insull told visitors that each of his three lawyers has studied the documentary evidence against him and that each one separately arrived at the conclusion that the court would not extradite him.

Insull told Greek visitors that the fraud charges against him are preposterous. He said he lost $3,000,000 of his own money in loans to his companies. He said he got no benefit from acts he is accused of as he lost great sums as a stockholder.

Chuckles to Himself.

The main line of defense of Insull's lawyers will be that the present bankruptcy case is a mere rehash of last year's case and has already been decided by the courts here, according to advices. The lawyers also argue that Insull ought not be sent back at least until others indicted with him have been tried, for they argue it is possible that the others might be set free.

There are indications that the defense lawyers have received material from Chicago during the last few days which accounts for Insull's cheerfulness. Anyway, the aged fugitive was sitting in his comfortable hospital quarters chuckling to himself and apparently counting the days when he will have the laugh on the American courts for the second time.

CANNING PROJECT SOLVES NEENAH'S RELIEF PROBLEM

Idle Also Find Jobs in City Garden.

Neenah, Wis., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—A municipal garden and canning project has been operated all summer by this city. From May 15 until the present time the city garden has kept between 100 and 175 persons occupied for at least three days a week at wages of 40 cents an hour. The project has produced enough food to supply a large part of the needs of the town's destitute families. More than 200,000 cans of tomatoes, string beans, carrots, beets, and swiss chard have been put up.

"Neenah has taken the attitude that work was much the best relief to give," said Clare D. Rejahl, director of the mayor's committee on unemployment relief. "The matter of a municipal garden was investigated and the decision made that the city operate it instead of parceling out plots to individuals.

Gardens Close to City.

"We rented 76 acres close enough to the city to make it convenient for men to walk out and back. We planted only those things which could be canned or winter stored. The planting was done by hand and the cultivating done by unemployed teamsters in town. A local paper mill offered space for a canning plant and agreed to furnish the necessary steam and power.

"We borrowed the canning equipment from an institution which was not using it and hired a local man with canning experience to supervise the work.

Same Pay for Women.

"Women were used mostly in preparing the produce, but when a woman was hired her husband was laid off and stayed at home while his wife worked. The same rate of pay was given. The produce is finding a ready market and it is our intention to dispose of the entire surplus. We believe we will have a good portion of the cost returned to us after the sale of goods is completed."

DAVISONS ADD LION, LEOPARD TO AFRICA GROUP

New York, Oct. 8. — [Special.] — George H. Sherwood, director of the American Museum of Natural History, announced today that Mrs. F. Trubee Davison, co-leader of the expedition sent to Africa by the institution of which her husband is the head, has added a lion and a leopard to the specimens collected by it for the Akeley African hall.

After completing their work for the elephant habitat group early in August, the Davisons, with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, went by airplane to Tanganyika to obtain a lion and a leopard. According to a letter from Mr. Davison it fell to Mrs. Davison's lot to get both specimens.

of his patients as well as their physical ailments, for this will be made necessary by the increased nervous strain and resultant nervous exhaustion encountered even in the life of the average individual. It will be an interesting question in the study of evolution to observe how the nervous system will adapt itself to this increased strain.

"Nor will the adaptation of psychology be limited to medicine; practical use of it will be made in schools in an effort to adapt the pupils to their environment."

Future progress in medicine will depend, Dr. Crile maintains, on progress in the fundamental sciences of chemistry and physics.

Mechanistic Trend of Thought.

"Either protoplasm and the living beings constructed of protoplasm," said Dr. Crile, "are mechanisms which derive their energy from the ordinary forces, or they are not. The present trend of thought regarding the nature of protoplasm is strongly mechanistic, and has been so especially since the strange medley of mysticism and mechanism has begun to be separated into its component parts.

"Already we know that the phenomena of life are only phenomena of energy. Already we know that all energy is interpreted by the known laws of physics and chemistry. Already we know that no living thing can exist in the absence of chemical activity. Already we know that drugs, anesthetics, narcotics, and poisons act upon the living molecule chemically and not mystically. Already we know that bacteria are merely forms of protoplasm which are organized to attack this or that tissue as a result of adaptation. Already we know that the interactions of tissues are chemical and physical in nature."

Quest for Origin of Protoplasm.

The first problem of the new medical research, Dr. Crile said, will be to discover the form of energy which gives protoplasm with its power to grow and function. It is already known that various functions of the body set up waves of energy of varying wave length, and those wave lengths have been measured.

"Of even more importance," Dr. Crile continued, "will be the development of such exact knowledge of the organic molecule that the chemist will be able to control the mechanism we call protoplasm in the same way that an internal combustion engine is controlled.

"In this century the process by which the ductless grands govern the body will be so understood that the chemist will be able to supply this or that deficiency on the part of the ductless glands by the product itself or by a synthesised product so that the desired level of physical and nervous activity can be sustained."

Surgeons Welcomed at Fair.

Dr. Crile was to have spoken a second time at the open air massmeeting in the evening at which World's Fair officials welcomed the visiting surgeons, in whose honor this week has been named Surgeons' week at the Fair, and a chorus of a thousand nurses sang.

However, after casting a glance at some 4,000 chilly spectators, the surgeons cut their program short, inviting the audience to attend the massmeeting Wednesday night in the Chicago Stadium, at which leaders of the profession will conduct another discussion for laymen.

Dr. Frederick H. Martin, founder and director-general of the college, introduced some of the distinguished foreign surgeons who are attending the congress.

The professional sessions of the congress start today in the Stevens hotel, where numerous symposiums, followed by round table discussions, will be held on surgical subjects, and in fifty hospitals throughout Chicago and its suburbs, where approximately a thousand clinics will be conducted between today and Friday, the closing day of the congress.

DOCTORS' AIDS TO MEET

In conjunction with the annual clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons, dietitians, hospital recording librarians, and anesthetists will open national conventions in Chicago today.

The Congress of Anesthetists, at the Congress hotel, is a memorial to Dr. John Snow, the Englishman who in the 1840's developed the first safe and efficient methods of operative anesthesia. Honorary president of the congress is Dr. Arno B. Luckhardt of the University of Chicago, developer of ethylene gas, the newest of widely used anasthetics. He will report on recent discoveries in the field.

The use of radio and phonograph music as an agent to divert the minds of patients undergoing operations under local anesthetics will be discussed by Dr. A. F. Erdmann of the Eye and Ear hospital in Brooklyn. Another session will be devoted to the use of oxygen atmospheres in therapy.

Dietitians Hear Talks on Fair.

The American Dietetic association held a preliminary session of its convention yesterday afternoon at the Palmer house, at which Chauncey McCormick told the thousand convention delegates about the $75,000,000 World's Fair art exhibit at the Art institute. Louis Skidmore of the World's Fair architectural staff discussed the architecture, color, and lighting of the Fair buildings.

Members of the association are engaged both in the hospital and restaurant fields, as well as in research laboratories and university instruction. Miss Kate Daum, president of the association, is expected to report on the findings of the federal department of labor in its three year investigation of malnutrition in children.

Librarians Start Sessions Today.

The Association of Record Librarians of North America, whose membership of 300 consists of the librarians who keep clinical records of hospitals, is also meeting at the Palmer house. Its sessions open today and continue until Friday.

Three thousand nurses are expected to attend the convention of the Illinois State Nurses association, which opens a three day session Wednesday at the Medinah-Michigan Avenue club.

CHILD HURT IN CRASH.

Moline, Ill., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Marcus Dittman, 5 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Dittman Sr. of Lincoln, Neb., is in a grave condition in the Moline Public hospital today as a result of a skull fracture incurred when the Dittman machine and one operated by C. HELP THE FARMER
WE DO OUR PART

The farmer—Industry's biggest customer—can buy articles made in city factories only when he has a market for the products of his farm . . . Anheuser-Busch is a large customer of the farmer, using annually 72,000,000 lbs. of barley, 14,400,000 lbs. of rice and 1,500,000 lbs. of hops. Also 140,000,000 lbs. of corn in our Corn Products Division.

CITY jobs will be more plentiful when agriculture—the Nation's biggest consumer of city-made goods—is able to buy.

But how can the farmer buy unless he can sell his produce at a profit?

That's the purpose of the new tax on processing wheat. To give people who live on farms—millions of men, women and children—the money they need to buy city-made goods—to put city men back to work.

And a large part of this first "Business Revival Tax" must be collected by the baker to be passed on to the farmer. This is the law of the "New Deal."

The baker serves us all. Let us recognize his efforts to maintain the low price of nature's most economical food.

Let us remember that all of the tax on processing wheat goes back to the farmer, soon to return for city-made goods—thus the circle will be complete.

So let's eat two more slices of bread every day and help the baker help the farmer and help our jobless neighbors. Workshops will open when the farmer begins to buy.

BALK CHILDLESS WIVES' EFFORTS TO GRAB ALIMONY

Bureau Comes to Defense of Husbands.

Thus Miss Ruth Coleman, assistant director of the Cook county bureau of public welfare, expresses the attitude of the alimony bureau towards the professional alimony seeker. The bureau was founded seven years ago as a part of the public welfare department and has collected and paid out close to $1,000,000 in alimony during its existence.

Alimony is recognized by the bureau only in the sense of money paid by the husband to the wife for support of their children, Miss Coleman emphasized. Strangely enough, perhaps, in this office conducted solely by women, husbands are given every consideration and sympathy.

Willing to Support Families.

"We find a fine willingness to support their families on the part of most men after divorce," Miss Coleman declared. "We never ask for the imprisonment of a husband unless it is clearly shown that he is deliberately dodging his responsibilities. We believe him when he says he is penniless and do not attempt to spy upon him unless the wife comes in with evidence that he has been telling falsehoods about his financial condition.

"We sometimes encourage a wife to take less than the amount of alimony ordered by the court when we find that the husband's salary has been reduced. Common sense appeals to most persons, we find, although there are men and women who will not be reasonable when this alimony question comes up."

The bureau also undertakes the investigation of cases where the custody of children is involved. It has established a service with social organizations in other cities whereby husbands and wives who move out of Illinois may be investigated.

Alimony Payments Gain.

Alimony payments through the bureau had decreased steadily since 1929, according to records, but in July of this year showed a pickup which was attributed by the officials to the trend towards reemployment.

In July $9,487 was paid into the bureau by husbands for the support of their wives. This increased to $10,473 in August and $10,574 in September. At the present rate of collections October will show a total of $12,000, Miss Coleman estimated. The above figures compare with collections of approximately $9,000 for each of the months of July, August, and September of 1932, according to the records.

1927	96,146	1931	138,289
1928	135,794	1932	121,968
1929	172,063

Collections in 1933 thus far indicate an estimated collection of more than $125,000. The bureau handles only cases specifically referred to it by the courts. Most of these cases involve small weekly payments of support money.

Problems for Judges.

A tour of the divorce courts last week revealed more cases where the alimony question puzzled judges. The reduced circumstances of many husbands offer a problem for the jurists which is often difficult to solve because of conflicting statements by the parties involved.

Dr. Emanuel Friend, senior surgeon at the Michael Reese hospital, was summoned before Judge Rudolph F. Desort to answer the alimony plea of Mrs. Magdalen Friend, now living at the Georgian hotel, 423 Davis street, Evanston, who is suing him for separate maintenance.

Dr. Friend testified that he had been paying his wife's hotel bills and other expenses. He declared he could pay no more alimony, asserting that his income from his medical practice had been only $1,722 since Jan. 1, 1933. Cross-examination brought out that he had paid $25,700 taxes on property he owns and had sold some securities to pay the taxes. The wife's attorney insisted that this showed that the surgeon was able to pay higher alimony.

Must Continue Support.

After listening to the testimony the judge continued the case until Oct. 20, ordering the doctor to continue supporting his wife until that date. He pointed to this case as affording an example of the difficulty of fixing an equitable alimony figure. The husband and wife in this case had been married many years and she is entitled to support, even though there are no children, on the ground that she has given most of her life to her husband, the judge asserted.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE PRESS, FREE OR MUZZLED.

Mr. Hitler's control of the newspapers, of the expression of opinion and the publication of information, has been put into a code of laws making journalism a licensed profession and requiring that it promote Nazi patriotism. By Nazi patriotism is meant support of racial proscriptions and the glorification of the dictatorship.

Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of public enlightenment, explains that the freedom of the press is an individualistic fallacy and that it is the absolute right of the state to supervise the formation of public opinion. The German press is to be single-minded, which means that it will have no mind at all.

The German dictatorship is not breaking new ground in suppressing opinion to control government. European autocracy elsewhere has made censorship of the press and the public platform a means to its own ends, and America, where the institution of the free press is an institution of American liberty, has not been without premonitions warning that the liberty is not automatically guarded. Several states have stepped over the line in the direction of suppression and by laws permitting officials to stop publication when subjected to criticism have aroused apprehensions for journalistic freedom. It is true the cases in which the law has been used have been hard ones, but it is generally true that hard laws get their start in hard cases.

Government disposition here to influence mediums of information and opinion has been revealed most notably in the radio and movies. The latter consent willingly to furnish a government claque to escape moral censorship, and the radio, being controlled by the radio commission, feels the need of supporting government policies and avoiding criticism of them. Both the radio and the movie influence is considerable, and both are within government control, and at least indirect government pressure is applied to the newspapers, which alone stand for independence. Certain tabus are invoked in the government advantage and attempts are made to put an odium upon critical or opposing opinion and to color the news in favor of government policies.

In the hall of inscriptions of the Tribune Tower are engraved a number of utterances voicing American idealism in the struggle and progress of American liberties. They should be indelibly fixed in the consciousness of American citizens and are here repeated.

"Give me liberty to know, to utter and to argue freely according to my conscience, above all other liberties."—John Milton.

"Let it be impressed upon your minds, let it be instilled into your children, that the liberty of the press is the palladium of all civil, political and religious rights of freemen."—Junius.

"Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press and that cannot be limited without being lost."—Thomas Jefferson.

"To the press alone, checkered as it is with abuses, the world is indebted for all the triumphs which have been gained by reason and humanity over error and oppression."—James Madison.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers, I will give him a corrupt and servile house of commons, I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office, I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence, I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him to purchase up submission and overawe resistance; and yet armed with the liberty of the press, I will go forth to meet him undismayed. I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter."—Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

"The struggle for freedom of speech has marched hand in hand in the advance of civilization with the struggle for other great human liberties. History teaches that human liberty cannot be secured unless there is freedom to express grievances."—Floyd E. Thompson, former chief justice Illinois Supreme court.

"The administration of government has become more complex. The opportunities for malfeasance and corruption have multiplied. Crime has grown to most serious proportions. And the danger of its protection by unfaithful officials and of the impairment of the fundamental security of life and property by criminal alliances and official neglect emphasize the primary need of a vigilant and courageous press, especially in great cities. The fact that the liberty of the press may be abused by miscreant purveyors of scandal does not make any the less necessary the immunity of the press from previous restraint in dealing with official misconduct."—Charles Evans Hughes, chief justice of the United States.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

The suppression of information and opinion is one of the foundations of autocratic and theocratic government. The encouraging thought for any people subjected to it is that if they have any stamina it always fails. Weak people have expired under it and their dictatorship along with them. But if the curtain isn't about to descend on a people, which is unbelievable as to Germany, the autocrat has strengthened his immediate position, but has written his own end more legibly.

The suppression of the freedom of opinion drives opposition underground for the time being. The critical press takes to the cellars. Neither Cromwell nor the Stuarts could suppress the pamphleteer and French autocracy could not dispose of Voltaire. Instead of dealing with conservative, honestly stated criticism of government acts, the dictator deals soon with conspiracies. Information, instead of being credible, becomes fantastic, but easily believed because the acts of government suppressing truth have given rumors credibility.

If this resistance were not dependable the case of a people so imposed upon would be hopeless. Little need be said to argue the case against attempts to control society by forcing all public information and opinion into the government mold. No government ever possessed the wisdom to do this, even if its intent were better than is possible in human nature. It would mean that the inevitable mistakes of a few men would be covered by falsification of the record. No society can progress under such a code and no progressive society would long tolerate it. Whenever such measures have been undertaken by government the people were instantly headed for revolt or decay. In their present mood the German people may be either eager for such regimentation or feel unable to resist. But their destiny, if it is what they hope it will be, is not found in the codes of Nazi suppression.

CRIME AND CRIMINAL LAWYERS.

Attorney General Cummings, discussing the anti-crime campaign of his department, has called attention to a phase of organized criminality which has often been commented upon in TRIBUNE editorials. "One of the most characteristic things in modern predatory crime," says the attorney general, "is the way in which members of the bar have stooped to illegal practices in helping the perpetrators of crime." And pledging his department to a determined effort to rid the profession of "these scavengers," he adds:

"Any experienced and honorable member of the bar knows how far he can go in the defense of a person accused of crime. But when it comes to telling the criminal how to commit crime, when they connive at the escape of criminals and explain how to avoid punishment, the time has come in this country for a cleanup of the bar."

It is to be hoped the American bar will be moved by the attorney general's pungent remarks to address itself in all communities to the cure or at least the more effective restraint of this notorious scandal. There has been, it seems to us, too much laissez faire in the attitude of the profession toward this scandal. No doubt there are great difficulties in its remedy, but they must yield in great measure to a persistent will in the profession to expose unethical and even criminal practices.

There have always been lawyers especially skilled in the trial and defense of criminal charges. The defense of any individual charged with crime is not only a lawful but an essential function of the profession. But this function does not include malpractice, unscrupulous devices to defeat justice. Any individual charged with crime is entitled to a fair trial, to a full assertion of his rights under the law—and he is entitled to no more. When his lawyer has insured him of this he has done his full duty. But, as the attorney general points out, there has risen in recent times a type of criminal lawyer who goes far beyond this point, whose practice is virtually confined to the representation of habitual criminals, and whose success is founded upon his lack of scruples and his skill at defeating justice. Practitioners of this kind are a regular and powerful adjunct of organized criminality, and they constitute not only a public menace but a scandalous blot upon the public credit of the legal profession. Difficult as it is to expose and punish them, the task is one of the plainest duties of the bar, both for the sake of the public and of the honorable profession of the law.

Editorial of the Day

[Grand Rapids Press.]

The announced campaign of the Michigan Automobile Dealers' association for modification of the state sales tax to prevent pyramiding deserves the support of every Michigan taxpayer. Probably the most ridiculous aspect of the sales levy is its pyramiding practices, especially its taxation of taxes already paid by the consumer.

As W. D. Edenburn, manager of the association, points out, the purchaser of a motor car must pay a sales tax not only on the actual price of the car but on the federal taxes against the vehicle as well. This is the case with other types of merchandise also, especially cigarets and gasoline. The four cent federal and state gas tax, for instance, is retaxed by the sales tax. There is no possible justification for such a system.

Until just the other day Michigan's sales tax "czar," James E. Mogan, insisted on levying the sales tax against sales tax collections. The merchant collecting three cents on a dollar purchase was informed that he would have to turn into the state coffers a three per cent tax on $1.03. An avalanche of protest was required to gain a modification of this ridiculous ruling.

Merchants, manufacturers and farmers have not yet gained exemption for processing, servicing, and production goods. The tax board has "passed the buck" to the legislature.

The longer the sales tax continues in its present form the more apparent its abuses will be. It should be the first subject to which the special session of the legislature should turn. Unless prompt action is taken to revise the law and to eliminate its inequities there is apt to be a spontaneous revolt against it.

THE STOPPING POINT.

An Englishman who had the reputation of being a fortune hunter was being shown by the father of a girl he had met over the family estate.

"And does your property go as far as that strip of woods?" inquired the Englishman, pointing.

"It does."

"Does it go away across that meadow?"

"Yes."

"Does it go to the river over there?"

"Yes. But remember one thing—it doesn't go with Margaret."—Boston Transcript.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

CHICAGO DAY, the anniversary of the great fire in 1871, caused by a cow kicking over a kerosene lamp. But today we have no fears of another great disaster like that. We don't have any kerosene lamps and no cows. No, cows and kerosene lamps are gone from Chicago forever. The only things that bother the citizens of our great metropolis today are fan dancers, where to park the car, and the human squirrels who crunch peanuts in the movies.

IT'S JUST A TRIFLE difficult always to follow the arguments of the preparedness advocates. "If America had been adequately prepared in 1914," said a speaker at the Methodist conference last week, "there would not have been a war." But Germany was prepared in 1914. And there was a war. And after the war, oh, was Germany surprised?

SONNET.

Between the hour of my birth and of
My dying lies a bridge, a finger's span
Of time, too narrow-built to carry love:
A footpath this, too frail to hold a van
Full-packed with love's accessories and wares.
So must I carry over one by one
My treasures, faring as a porter fares,
Who fails at noonday, and his task not done?
Thus when you meet me on the other side
You'll find me in a tunic limp with wear,
With eyes where nought but patience can abide,
And aching arms, and most untidy hair.
And should you think 'tis little I have brought,
Forgive the lack; beyond this I have nought.

"PRUSSIA ADVOCATES DEATH for Persons Afflicted with Incurable Disease."—Headline. Yes, and let Herr Hitler walk around with that horrible mustache. Is there no justice!

THE SAFETY COUNCIL at its session in Chicago recommended that laws should prohibit the jaywalker from jaywalking. Much can be done to lower the terrible number of motor accidents, but when the safety council says to make a jaywalker stop jaywalking they might as well say that the Rocky mountains should be moved over to the Atlantic side, the Mississippi shall turn north and empty into the Arctic ocean, or that two and two if added together shall make seven. The jaywalker is immune to laws, reason, experience, sense, fear, caution, or of anything there be in the heaven above or the earth beneath. The safety council might as well make laws to control the solar system as jaywalkers. Out in the country they stand in the middle of the road and shout merrily as a driver risks overturning by jerking suddenly to one side, "Half of it's mine," and in town they slow down and stroll slowly in front of a car with an expression of "All right, hit me if you dare." No, mankind can take certain precautions against lightning, cyclones, and the seven year itch. But against the jaywalker it stands paralyzed and helpless.

WHEN WE GET BACK on speaking terms with the soviets we ought to ask the Reds if they won't lend us the good old Russian word "neechevo." The nearest anybody can come to an English translation of "neechevo" is "never mind." But it means so much more than that—cheerfulness, hope, faith, charity, trust, resignation—oh, there's so much in that simple word "neechevo." And right now, when we ask the price of gasoline and lamb fries and pork chops and books or a pair of pants or milk or coal or anything, it would be so nice instead of saying horrid words just to smile and murmur sweetly "neechevo!"

DISTILLERS, we are informed from Washington, have been given permission to manufacture seven million gallons of whisky before the end of the year. Very good, but what kind of whisky will it be, fifteen year old or twenty year old? Personally, I always hate to drink twenty year old whisky if it was made day before yesterday. Now, whisky that has been properly aged, that is mellow and golden, whose fierce fires have been quenched by the years into a gentle warmth—now, that is whisky worth while. But it takes time to produce whisky like that—say ten years at least—or, in this country where hurry is the rule for everything, at least ten minutes.

RUDE BANDITS are continuing their unpleasant custom of making their victims lie on the floor. With the approach of winter this thing is bound to bring on an epidemic of colds and possibly pneumonia. Would it not be well to have the south side (when we are facing that way) of our apparel wadded with wool or cotton so as to avoid illness? And we would be able to hit the floor when the bandits bade us without receiving bumps or bruises. The tailors and the dressmakers should talk this thing over and create some nice, fashionable hit-the-floor suits for winter wear.

SONG.

Blow me a kiss at sundown,
Breathe me a prayer at dawn,
Weave me a dream for the long, long nights
To keep while you are gone.

Leave me a wisp of your laughter,
A warm little, snug little song;
For I will be so . . . so alone, dear,
And you will be gone so long!

A REDUCING DIET.

IN 1932 the American Dietetic association adopted a basic reducing diet. It was:

Breakfast: ½ grapefruit, ½ cup cereal, 1 tablespoon cream, 1 glass milk, 1 slice graham toast, ½ square butter. Total calories, 284.

In practice some other fruit may be used, but the total number of calories should not vary far from the figure given.

Lunch: 2 eggs, ½ head lettuce salad, ¼ cup each carrots and spinach, 1 glass whole milk, 1 square butter, ½ slice graham bread. Total calories, 503.

If the items on this meal are changed the total number of calories must not vary far from the figure given. It is not contemplated that any salad dressing should be used. If any is added to the lettuce, one composed of mineral oil and vinegar has no food value. If plain mayonnaise is used each tablespoon will add 100 calories. Two tablespoons of thousand island dressing will add 125 calories, and a like quantity of French dressing 127.

Evening meal: 3½ ounces very lean beef [this amount will measure 4x4x½], 2-3 cup string beans, lettuce, and tomato salad [2 leaves of green lettuce, 1 tomato], 1 medium sized peach, ½ slice graham bread, 1 square butter. Total calories, 333.

Fish or chicken can be substituted for beef, but the total number of calories must not be departed from materially. One-fourth cup of potted chicken furnishes 100, as compared with 116 calories supplied by the beef portion. A piece of roast chicken 4x2x¾ inch supplies 100 calories. Dark meat is a little more watery and contains twice as much iron as light meat. If graham bread is properly made it contains twice as much iron as white bread.

The diet as recommended supplies 1,200 calories, and is well balanced as between fats, carbohydrates, and proteins. It contains enough minerals, and of the right kinds, and enough vitamins for ordinary purposes.

It can be used for a long time without impairing health. The number of calories suffices for maintenance of well being and health, but not for the maintenance of weight if the person dieting is working even moderately hard. It should bring about a slow loss in weight due to loss in body fat, and not accompanied by great weakness nor result in material impairment of muscles.

While using it as the sole source of food the rate of loss of weight can be speeded up or slowed down by the amount of work done.

RESTLESS YOUTH.

Mrs. W. F. L. writes: A boy 23 is restless, acts more like a boy of 15; at times is deaf in one ear and has a sort of wanderlust. His tonsils and adenoids are bad. Will it change him to have them removed?

REPLY.

If they are bad, have them attended to. Gamble that much. However, the chances are the boy has a personality disorder that has resulted from some other cause. Has he been well trained in a good home? Could he have had a mild attack of sleeping sickness or meningitis? Why the deafness? Certain types of personality never mature beyond the stage of adolescent behavior.

ITCHING AND OLD AGE.

E. P. writes: As soon as I retire for the night my hands and wrists begin to itch and burn, causing me to get no rest before 2 or 3 o'clock. I handle nothing filthy or poisonous and wash my hands with soap and water. I am 73 years old and getting in a rundown condition.

REPLY.

Old people are very likely to be troubled by itching. Their itches are seldom due to bugs and, in consequence, sulphur does them no good. Their skin is too dry and deficient in grease. Stay in moist air as much as possible. Use plenty of grease on your skin. Any ointment will do. Our friends, the old German people, preferred goose grease.

OWNER LIABLE FOR DAMAGE.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—[Friend of the People.]—Next door to our home is a poplar tree that is hollow and rotted and is in a very dangerous condition. It is liable to fall and do severe damage. How should we go about having it removed? W. B. T.

This tree is on private property, and the city has no jurisdiction. The owner is liable for any damage that might result if he does not remove the tree or have it removed at his own expense. WALTER WRIGHT, Superintendent Parks, Recreation, and Aviation.

RENT PAYMENT.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can a judge order me, a tenant, to pay rent due to my landlord's wife? My landlord is in an alimony row and doesn't want me to pay her. 2. If such an order were given, would I be liable for contempt of court if I failed to comply with the order? F. S.

1. Depends on the nature of the court proceedings.

2. You might be liable. We advise you not to disobey the court order without being sure of your ground.

FRIEND OF THE FARMER

[Inquiries on problems of farm management, financing or governmental regulations sent to this department must be accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.]

W. W. B. asks: Will there be a farm loan corporation in each county of each state, or just in large cities, to make government loans on farms? I am inquiring for Mississippi friends in Pike county.

Answer—Ten or more farmers within convenient traveling distance of each other, all of whom wish to make loans from a federal land bank, may form a national farm loan association. The charter for such an association is granted by the farm credit administration, which also designates the area within which the association has jurisdiction. As other farmers in this area apply for loans they will be referred to this local association. The association will assess all costs of appraisal and administration of loans on the members. Members of such association are given a rate of 4½ per cent on first mortgage loans.

C. M. I. asks: I am a young married man, have three children, and am much interested in farming. Where can I apply for such work or a place to support my family?

Answer — Plans are now being worked out by the federal government to assist people in your position who are interested in farming in obtaining a location on a place where you could support a family, but the plans are not completed as yet.

Mrs. M. J. H. asks: I did not plant cotton this year on my one and one-half sections of land in Texas, supposing I would be eligible for the government bonus. Now I am informed the cotton had to be planted and turned under; also that only those who live on the land can collect the bonus.

Answer—Only cotton land owners are paid the rental price for idle land. It is our understanding that unless you entered into a contract with the government's AAA you would not be eligible for the bonus on your unplanted cotton land. An official ruling on this could be obtained from Cully A. Cobb, cotton administrator, care of AAA, Washington, D. C.

S. M. asks: What is considered a fair yield of soy beans under average corn belt conditions?

NRA Question Box

Following are some typical questions occasioned by the national recovery act and their answers as given by Paul Kunning, secretary of the Chicago Recovery council which is aiding President Roosevelt's economic rehabilitation movement here. Other questions and their answers will be given in this column daily.

Q.—The firm for which we work pays us partly in cash and partly in purchase orders which are good at certain stores. Is this correct under the NRA?

A.—According to a very recent ruling of the NRA, wages should be real and payable in cash or checks readily convertible into cash. An arrangement as indicated in effect in your establishment certainly is not in conformity with this ruling.

Q.—Is it true that under the NRA only American citizens should be considered for employment?

A.—No, this is not true. It would be just as bad to have unemployed aliens as unemployed citizens. The net result so far as the recovery program is concerned would be the same should distinctions be made.

Q.—I am a waitress in a restaurant which flies the NRA banner, but we still work 10 hours a day. What can be done about it?

A.—A written report of this situation, giving the name of the restaurant, should immediately be made to the NRA compliance board, 201 North Wells street. Sign your name to it with the assurance that your name will not be divulged. Upon receipt of this complaint the compliance board will give the owner of this restaurant an opportunity to correct the error of his ways, or, if he refuses to comply, may recommend to the federal government the withdrawal of his Blue Eagle.

ABOUT SOME PUBLIC WORKS.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 27.—The following quotations from a letter received from the manager of the Portland, Ore., chamber of commerce will show the taxpayer where some of his money goes. The letter was in reply to my inquiry about the Dalles-Celilo canal in Oregon and Washington. The chief of United States army engineers stated in his report for 1931 that the canal is eight and one-half miles long with five locks; cost of new work, $4,717,177; maintenance in 1930, $20,902. With interest at 4 per cent the capital cost of this project plus maintenance for 1930 amounted to $209,589. No freight traffic passed through the canal since 1925.

"You are correct that there has been no commercial traffic through the Celilo canal on the Columbia river for about fifteen years . . ." he writes. "The upper entrance is dangerous because of wind conditions. The lower end is difficult to enter about half of the year and impossible about two months. . . . Further, this canal was built for only the old type boats carrying about 200 tons, which is not an economical load today. . . . We have hopes of eventually securing a dam which will entirely drown this canal. It is true this organization is favorable to inland waterways development."

The taxpayer will note that there was an engineering blunder somewhere or the canal would not have been built in the first place. Such blunders are not rare, however. One was made in the erection of the first dam in the Ohio river at Davis island when the original pool was decided at six feet above mean low water. The depth was increased to nine feet by the Emsworth dam, and now it is proposed to build a dam below the Emsworth dam to make a deeper pool all the way to dams No. 1 in the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers. There will be dams in the Missouri river from the Mississippi to Kansas City. If there is no provision made for keeping the river to its course that changeable river will leave some of the dams miles from the stream.

Prepare yourself to pay your share of taxes to build a canal from the Ohio river to Youngstown, O., camouflaged by the name of a canal from the Ohio to Lake Erie. The newspapers in Pittsburgh have been publishing that the canal is to help the steel mills in that valley to get their fuel cheaper, enabling them to compete better with mills in other districts. The valley in which that city is situated is chronically short of water and the rapidly increasing population is driving the civic authorities to their wits' end. The canal to Youngstown would give them a permanent and ample supply of water.

You and I would get off cheaper by building a pumping station on the Ohio and a pipe line thirty-five miles long to Youngstown. The canal would cost, at the last reckoning, 40 million dollars. Four per cent of that would almost do the job. HENRY F. GILG.

SPARKS.

Philadelphia, Sept. 30.—The boys who are worrying about what NRA is doing to the dear old constitution had better consider what failure of NRA will do to their beloved profitable mass production system.

Work being what we are all working for, it sounds more sensible to have mediators consulted and every means of arbitration exhausted before strikes are declared.

WALTER SONNEBERG.

OF SCHOPENHAUER AND SALLY RAND.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—From the dawn of civilization we find philosophers grappling with the question of the origin of evil, but it seems to have been reserved to an editor of THE TRIBUNE to be so befuddled about the nature of evil as an editorial devoted to nudity in yesterday's issue shows him to be.

It would be beyond our own powers of exegesis to clarify a mind of that caliber, but we would like to point out to the editor that Schopenhauer and Ernest Haeckel, and perhaps other men whose opinions command respectful hearing, have said that there "is greater difference between the brains of men of their rank and the average man than between the average man and his nearest simian relative." Putting aside all question of "the nature of evil," is it not the duty of the race and of the state, the guardian of the race, to direct the race, as far as may be in its power, to that higher plane, away from its ape ancestors? Can we turn back to a stage long left behind and still progress to a higher plane?

If the editor's mind is capable of clarification we would suggest to him the reading of "The Rebellion of the Masses" by Ortega y Gasset. The phenomena of nudism, as the "claiming by the vulgar of the right to inflict their vulgarity on others," might possibly become clear to him through that channel.

In conclusion we would like to point out to the editor that it is not the function of the court to decide moral questions, but to enforce the law, and that one of the laws on the statute books [enacted by men not quite so befuddled as some of those of today] is that "indecent exposure" is punishable. If nudity is not in the meaning of that law we must all of us relearn our mother tongue. DEGOUTES.

THE REAL CRIMINAL.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—May I express my appreciation of the manner in which THE TRIBUNE presented the freeing of Sheriff Neal of Harrison county, Ind., in this morning's issue of THE TRIBUNE?

In the majority of stories of crime the criminal is shown as a man of superior intelligence and cunning. Your reporter gave what seemed to me to be a much more accurate picture of social misfits, wandering around in the darkness and rain, unable to plan united action, and quite unequal to the situation in which they found themselves. Certainly there are no high spots of dramatic courage and dashing action, and I, for one, believe this picture to be true, which is the first requisite for good reporting, and I also believe it to be good publicity for crime. Why paint a picture that is essentially dirty and drab in crimson and gold? ZELLA M. ROSE.

NEW ALUMINUM MIRROR HELPS STUDY OF STARS

Opens Up "Blind Side" of Radiation to Science.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The "blue rainbows" of nearly 100 stars, made by their ultra violet rays, have been caught with a new aluminum mirror by Cornell astronomers and physicists on top of an 8,000 foot mountain peak in Arizona.

This announcement, made public tonight, indicates that one of the "blind sides" of radiation from all stars has been opened on a grand scale for observation by scientists.

The invisible rays, all of them a blue darker than anything the eye can detect, are reflecttd by the mirror to photographic plates. The photos record the light as spectra, or rays broken into bands of blue of varying hues, which merge into each others the same as the colors of the visible rainbow.

Notes Electrical Condition.

These color bands appear as straight lines, standing side by side, like pickets in a fence. Each line is an unmistakable sign of some temperature or some electrical condition in the distant star. Each shows the condition and the action of either masses of molecules or masses of the still smaller atoms.

Each indicates also what kind of substance these molecules and atoms are made of. All the lines reveal conditions which do not appear in the visible light of stars.

The precise meanings of these blue rainbow lines have been learned in laboratories, where the ultra violet spectrum of light has been under close study for years. But it has not been easy to get clear pictures of the ultra violet spectrum of stars.

Where Aluminum Helps.

This invisible light is absorbed by the silver which ordinarily has been used for astronomical mirrors. But aluminum reflects it to a high degree, and makes it easier to get good ultra violet images.

The mirror was developed by R. C. Williams of the Cornell physics department. So promising were the tests here at Ithaca that the national research council and the Heckscher council financed an expedition to Arizona. S. L. Boothroyd, professor of astronomy, headed a party, including Williams, R. W. Shaw, George Sabine, and H. C. Ketcham.

Agitator Against Carol Shot by Police Chiefs

BUCHAREST, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Prof. Gregor Fortzu, recently active in agitating against a reduction of civil service salaries as well as against King Carol himself, was shot and seriously wounded today by two police commissioners. They had gone to Fortzu to question him regarding an anti-government proclamation he was alleged to have made.

SOLDIERS GUARD DE VALERA'S FOE AT PARTY RALLY

CASTLEBAR, Irish Free State, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Gen. Owen O'Duffy, his head bandaged with surgical plaster as a result of an attack in Tralee, addressed a United Ireland party meeting here today.

The event passed without serious trouble, only a few youths being taken into custody for creating disturbances. Armored cars with mounted machine guns and truckloads of soldiers held in reserve were not needed.

O'Duffy declared that the Free State was rapidly being brought into a position of mob law and said President de Valera kept his office only because he pandered to the mob.

"I deny that I am a dictator," declared O'Duffy. "I want to end the rule of the gun. That is why I formed the national guard."

FRANCE DEMANDS CONTROL BEFORE REDUCING ARMS

Daladier Gives Approval of Four Year Plan.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 8.—France's answer to the German campaign for rearmament was delivered today through the mouth of Premier Edouard Daladier speaking at the closing banquet of the radical party at Vichy. It was a simple question of "What does Germany want to do?" It contained no hint of a refusal to continue discussion of disarmament while Germany is demanding the contrary.

"Hitherto all attempts to reach a durable understanding between the two peoples have failed," continued the premier, giving Europe one of the frankest public talks ever made by the responsible head of a government.

"No one contests Germany's right to live the life of a great power. No one thinks of humiliating Germany. We have occasionally heard her government proclaim publicly its desire for peace and we have seen manifest in diplomatic negotiations a will to bring about rapprochement of the two peoples.

Questions Warlike Actions.

"Why then on the other side of the Rhine do we see the entire youth of a nation being trained for war? Why these repeated demonstrations of mobilized masses? Why this refusal to take the first step toward disarmament? Why does Germany ask the right to construct now costly armaments which will have to be destroyed in a short time if a disarmament convention is signed?

"These are questions which rise before us. No one could reproach us for being determined to organize our own defense after the repeated tokens we have offered of our sincere love of peace."

France, Daladier declared, is eager to see a disarmament convention signed, but no more unconditional sacrifices could be made. The condition of further French disarmament, according to Daladier, is "a single loyal international accord organising progressive disarmament. It must be assured by an automatic and permanent supervision of armaments and its execution must be effectively guaranteed."

Favors Four Year Plan.

Daladier then repeated the broad lines of the disarmament convention envisaged in preliminary negotiations at Geneva—a four year trial period during which all armies would be bound not to augment armaments, followed by destruction of offensive weapons.

In speaking of the transformation of armies Daladier, it appeared, referred to the suppression of military forces like the Fascist militia and Nazi storm troops. Sanctions were only vaguely referred to in the speech and rearmament of Germany was not mentioned in so many words.

The address was important in that it publicly committed the government to support a thesis which hitherto had been discussed only in the back room. This, it is believed, will ease the Geneva tensity.

Promises Balanced Budget.

While the part of the speech dealing with foreign policy was most important, Daladier made his expected defense of the gold standard with unexpected vigor. Declaring that soundness of the franc depended upon public finances and that the continued existence of democracy in France depended on the security of the franc, the premier announced that immediately on the opening of parliament—next week—he would present a bill for balancing the budget. In a dramatic challenge he declared that within ten days France will either have balanced the budget or have a new government.

When it came to telling how he was planning to do the trick, the premier revealed only the broad lines—deflation of state expenses and some increased taxation, above all putting the screws on wealthy tax dodgers.

To help make the pill go down the government is offering public works to reduce unemployment. Daladier made clear, however, that he is not contemplating any experiments in planned economy for which he said France has "neither the time nor the means." From previous leaks it is known that instead of trying to raise prices like President Roosevelt, Daladier hopes to make the nation accept new taxes by a campaign to reduce living costs.

Does Not Demand Equality.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—Wilhelmstrasse issued an official statement today respecting reports published abroad declaring "it is completely false to say Germany demands arms equality with France after five years. Germany demands after five years only the further disarmament of other countries. As to weapons, for training purposes, all discrimination must now cease. But Germany does not demand the same number of weapons as others possess."

GERMANS ASK DAVIS TO ARRANGE MEETING WITH FRENCH CHIEFS

GENEVA, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Norman H. Davis, United States representative to the disarmament conference, is expected to arrange a conference between the representatives of France and Germany in which they can thresh out their armament differences. A request that he arrange such a conference was made today by Dr. Rudolf Nadolny, German representative. Capt. Anthony Eden, under secretary for foreign affairs of Great Britain, also arrived here today and conferred with Mr. Davis. Both are hostile to the idea of an adjournment.

The outstanding event of the past week regarded as an encouragement to success is Germany's move to be admitted on a basis of equality and frankness into five power conversations with Great Britain, France, the United States, and Italy. The statesmen assembled here are awaiting results of the British cabinet meeting tomorrow which is expected to decide whether England will back France in her decision that there must be no rearmament of Germany and that there must be a period of trial after which Germany would be allowed certain armaments.

Tomorrow's meeting of the steering committee of the conference probably will be devoted to a speech by Arthur Henderson, president of the conference.

NAZI GERMANY SENDS GREETINGS TO AMERICANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—With the Stars and Stripes and Nazi swastika flags fluttering overhead, Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, today conveyed Chancellor Adolf Hitler's greetings to the American colony, to the American nation, and especially to President Roosevelt at a great gathering of Americans and Germans in the Kroll opera house. The ceremony commemorated the 250th anniversary of the settling of Germantown, northern suburb and part of Philadelphia.

The celebration was organized by the Carl Schurz Memorial foundation, whose chairman, Dr. Hans Draeger, presided. The audience included United States Ambassador William E. Dodd and many representatives of the government and Nazi party.

[Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador to the United States, declined to deliver an address at Germantown Saturday because a swastika flag was not displayed on the speakers' stand. An aid explained that German diplomatic regulations prohibited him from making a speech in his official capacity unless the new German emblem was displayed. The celebration committee had omitted the flag out of fear of an anti-Hitler demonstration.]

Speaks of Germans Abroad.

Dr. Goebbels in his address said that the Hitler government more than any previous government realized the desirability of keeping in touch with Germans abroad.

"It is said Germans were too rapidly and strongly absorbed by the countries to which they emigrated," he added. "That is evidence that Germans are not unsocial or thirsty for expansion."

The younger generations of America and Germany would promote understanding, Dr. Goebbels continued, pointing as a symbol to the fact that boys and girls of the American school in Berlin and Hitler youths "today are marching side by side." He concluded with the hope that both countries working in sympathy and with respect for each other might overcome the distress of their peoples.

Dr. Goebbels, high Nazi officials, and storm troopers saluted the American flag. They also gave the Hitler salute as the American national anthem was played.

Will Merge Two States.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Germany will possess one state less after Jan. 1 when Mecklenburg-Strelitz will be incorporated with Mecklenburg-Schwerin. Both state diets will assemble at Rostock next Friday to vote formal approval. The laws and orders of Mecklenburg-Strelitz will pass out of existence and will be succeeded by the laws and orders of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

STRASBOURG, France, Oct. 8.—Alsace replied today to recent Nazi demonstrations on the eastern bank of the Rhine with a program of ceremonies to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the attachment to France of the province's three cantons, which belonged to the count of Hanau-Lichtenberg.

It was in answer to the count's appeal for military protection from brigands and other marauding invaders that King Louis XIII. sent 4,000 of his soldiers in October, 1633, to be garrisoned in the towns of Bouxwiller, Ingwiller, and Neuwiller.

A bronze tablet commemorating the arrival of these troops was dedicated today at the Bouxwiller town hall. Alsace did not become definitely French territory, however, until after the revolution.

TWO KILLED, 14 HURT IN BLAST ON BRITISH SUB

LONDON, Oct. 8. — Two seamen were killed and 14 others injured, nine seriously, by an explosion followed by a fire aboard the British submarine L-26 today at Campbeltown harbor, Argyllshire, on the west coast of Scotland.

Electrical batteries exploded as the vessel lay on the surface of the harbor. Most members of the crew were dining in the mess room above the battery room when one battery burst through the floor, flinging the men about in all directions. The destroyer Mackay was the first to the rescue after the disaster. Her crew, equipped with gas masks, aided in extinguishing the fire and taking off the injured.

The explosion was a sequel to a mishap which occurred several hours earlier. The submarine went aground on a reef near Kintyre peninsula yesterday afternoon during a fog. The craft was refloated at midnight and was believed to have been only slightly damaged. Apparently a slight hole was rent in the hull. Authorities believe the blast was caused by water reaching the batteries which were being recharged.

50,000 VIENNA SOCIALISTS DEFY DOLLFUSS RULE

General Strike Urged as Police Halt Speech.

VIENNA, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Fifty thousand Socialists, thronging the Vienna stadium, cheered white bearded Burgomaster Karl Seitz today as he ridiculed the Dollfuss-Fey régime in Austria as "verbal fireworks."

The same 50,000 also witnessed the police suddenly shut him off in the middle of the speech by the simple method of disconnecting the stadium loudspeakers.

Later the burgomaster was allowed to conclude briefly: "Why heap up words? Determination is more important than speeches."

General Strike Urged.

The massmeeting, which was billed as a songfest for workers, was a strange mixture of music, defiance and folk dancing. When the speech was concluded the crowd good humoredly poured out into the nearby prater and consumed large quantities of beer and sausage.

In the final moments of the meeting, however, the radicals scattered thousands of handbills urging a general strike.

"The last masks," stated the circulars, "have fallen—the Fascists, Engelbert Dollfuss and Emil Fey [vice chancellor] have seized the power. Their latest decree shamelessly proclaims concentration camps, imitating brown Fascism. But we refuse to succumb without a fight like the German working class. We will fight!"

Austria to Fight Marxism.

Representatives of the International Trade Union committee were present at the festivities.

The semi-official reichspost, acidly commenting upon the trade union communique concerned with "restoration of democracy" in Austria, said the Austrian government was determined to defend its independence not only against Hitler but against international Marxism.

"Foreign Socialist trade unions," said the newspaper, "cannot be permitted to interfere in the inner political affairs of Austria—even when the Marxists of Austria invite them."

Socialist Organ Confiscated.

Chancellor Dollfuss, who is spending the week-end in the country, made public a statement thanking all who congratulated him for his narrow escape from assassination last week. His statement concludes:

"The unity and happy resoluteness shown by the Austrian people in recent days are a sign and an assurance that we are on the right road from which no one and nothing can swerve us."

CAROL TO GIVE UP SWEETIE TO WED PRINCESS, REPORT

VIENNA, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A far reaching plan by Premier Valda-Voevod involving the marriage of King Carol of Rumania to a princess whose name has not yet been disclosed was rumored today in quarters well informed regarding Rumanian affairs.

There it is reported that Mme. Magda Lupescu, red haired beauty for whom Carol once renounced the throne, will quit Bucharest shortly to take up a residence abroad.

This is interpreted to mean the premier has succeeded in persuading the king to give up his stubborn opposition to more outspoken but less successful demands voiced by Julius Maniu, peasant party leader, regarding Mme. Lupescu's influence at court.

Rumanians Tear Down and Burn Soviet Flag

BUCHAREST, Oct. 8.—(AP)—For the first time since the world war, the soviet flag was displayed in Bucharest today, in connection with the international railway conference opening tomorrow. It was promptly torn down from the station, where it hung beside the flags of other nations, and burned by an angry crowd. Several persons were arrested.

HOTEL JANITOR FOUND DEAD.

Rudolph Mueller, 69 years old, janitor in the Austin hotel, at 420 North Clark street, was found dead yesterday in his room, a victim of heart disease.

LEGION POTATOES GIVEN TO IDLE BY JOHNSTON MYERS

A ton and a half of Idaho potatoes, donated by the Idaho Falls Legion drum and bugle corps, were distributed last night to several hundred destitute families living on the south side by the Rev. Johnston Myers, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church.

In the American Legion parade last week the western visitors handed out more than 5,000 ten pound sacks of Idaho russet baking potatoes as the drum and bugle corps float passed south in Michigan avenue. The remainder were donated yesterday to the charity relief by Dr. Myers, who has maintained a bread line for several years at his church at 2320 South Michigan avenue.

Some of the men and women attending the services last night walked several miles to participate in the services and receive an allotment of food.

GIRL WITNESS IN MURDER OF 4 FOUND SLAIN

Roanoke Rapids, N. C., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Marvel Cullum, 23 year old Roanoke Rapids woman who was a witness in the Cannon quadruple murder case in Boydton, Va., several months ago, was found slain early today near her home here.

Her throat had been slashed and her head and body were severely beaten.

No arrests had been made tonight, but officers said they were checking up on two possible suspects. They said they were investigating the possibility there was some connection between her death and the slaying of the four Cannons on their farm home.

The woman's body was found within 300 yards of the home of her mother, Mrs. M. D. Cullum, a widow, with whom she lived. She had been dead 24 to 36 hours when found.

The Cannon murder in which four men, two brothers and their two nephews, were killed preparatory to the robbery of their farmhouse occurred last March. Although the amount stolen was not known, popular opinion believed that there was about $35,000.

STEAMER LOSES PROPELLER AT SEA.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The marine department of the San Francisco chamber of commerce was advised today the steamship Texmar, en route from here to Baltimore, lost its propeller just north of Santa Barbara, Cal. The coast guard cutter Morris and tug boats from Los Angeles left that port to assist the steamer.

BUYERS ON PARADE!

Philadelphia's famous central-city shopping district—home of six of America's largest department stores and hundreds of specialty shops — resounds to the tread of extra thousands of buyers.

Philadelphians are actively buying in volume because of general revival of business. Increased demand for industrial and textile products adds to the purchasing power of Philadelphia — Workshop of the World — for here is to be found the diversification of industry that insures balance and stability.

Curtis-Martin Newspapers are the most influential selling force in this great market, since they provide the only complete coverage of both Philadelphia and its A. B. C. suburbs, containing 891,430 families — 3,745,253 people —58,191 retail outlets.

With one effort, one advertising schedule and one sales campaign, manufacturers concentrating in Philadelphia and the Curtis-Martin Newspapers can get more sales at less cost than in dozens of cities or numerous States combined.

Total retail sales in Philadelphia and its A. B. C. suburbs in 1932 aggregated $1,114,940,000, according to the Sales Management Survey of Spending Power. This exceeded total retail sales in the cities of Los Angeles and Boston combined; or total sales in Tennessee, Oregon, Idaho, Colorado and Vermont combined.

STATE STREET'S 100TH ANNIVERSARY WEEK

TODAY opens State Street's 100th anniversary week. It marks the close of a century of successful retailing . . . a hundred years of service to the people of this great community.

It opens a week of celebration by State Street stores, large and small . . . a birthday festival to which all Chicago is invited.

The week will be given over to offerings of merchandise selected and priced as an expression of appreciation of the patronage and good will of the buying public who make State Street possible.

It is State Street's answer to President Roosevelt's appeal to the merchants of America to help increase retail buying so that more men and women may be put back to work.

Every featured article in this novel event will dramatize in signal fashion the quality, style, assortments and economies for which State Street is famous throughout the world.

Fall wearing apparel, shoes, furniture, jewelry, kitchen ware, luxuries and necessities . . . the displays are unequaled. Every resource of every retailer, large and small, is behind State Street's 100th Anniversary Week. Factories in this country and abroad have been combed to find suitable merchandise of superior quality and lower price.

There isn't a man who won't be able to find this week some article he wants and needs . . . at a price that will make him take the time off to get it. There isn't a woman who won't feel justified in making this week one long, glorious shopping tour.

Prices on State Street can be relied upon to be consistently low whether the period be one of extreme low prices or whether the period be one of recovery from the depression.

Only a visit to the stores will tell you the whole story. Read the program of daily events. Plan your shopping trips so as to take maximum advantage of each day's special values.

Every day will count. Don't miss a single one. Selections generally are plentiful. In some instances of course . . . despite the best efforts of the buyers of the stores . . . there are only limited quantities. But as a matter of fact, such values as those shown in all departments and stores are bound to be in great demand . . . and apt to be quickly sold out regardless of the size of the stocks on hand.

It will be to your best advantage to shop every day for the special merchandise featured on that day. To find out what they are, read the advertisements each day in the Tribune.

Tuesday: Will be Home Needs Day! If you need furniture, electrical appliances, curtains or anything else for the household, Tuesday is the day to shop for them.

Wednesday: Will be Woman's Apparel Day! Hats, dresses, coats, all the personal accessories that delight a woman's heart will be the big feature on Wednesday.

Thursday: Will be Children's Day! It also is Columbus Day, a school holiday and a fine opportunity to outfit the children.

Friday: Will be State Street Day! The climax of the entire week. Merchants have special plans which will be divulged later. Watch the Tribune for the announcements.

Saturday: Will be Men's Day! Special attention has been given to the needs of men and on Saturday stores will hold a demonstration of quality at a price that will satisfy the keenest buyer.

Fortnightly Club Will Be Scene of Two Interesting Functions

Miss Jean Hyman to Bow Armistice Day; Edwin W. Simses to Entertain for Daughter and Son.

BY JUDITH CASS.

DURING the next few weeks the distinguished Georgian home of the Fortnightly club at 120 East Bellevue place will be the scene of two interesting parties. The afternoon of Armistice day, Nov. 11, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Hyman are presenting their debutante daughter, Jean, to society at a tea in the spacious parlors. On the evening of Oct. 28 Mr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Sims are giving a buffet supper and dancing party for their daughter, Miss Priscilla Sims, and their son, Edwin W. Sims Jr., at the club which is next door to their Bellevue place home.

Miss Hyman and her mother and father will receive their many friends between 4 and 7 o'clock. Assisting this lovely blue eyed, dark haired debutante will be a coterie of her friends who are also bowing to society this fall and winter.

Just a fortnight ago Miss Hyman was feted by her cousin, Miss Louisa Burrows, at a supper dance at the Onwentsia. It was last June that she finished at the French school in New York City. Previous to this she studied at the Master's school at Dobbs Ferry. Although the Hymans' winter plans are still a bit unsettled because of their return only a few weeks ago from their summer home at Harbor Point, Miss Hyman is anticipating an entire winter of debutante festivity in Chicago.

Spends Winter Free from Study.

Because Miss Sims was a student at Miss Beard's and then at Northwestern university while most of her friends were making their bows to society, the supper dance her family is giving for her on the 28th is not characterized as a debut party. Mr. and Mrs. Sims are, however, inviting the friends of their daughter and their younger son as well as many of their own to come between the hours of 7 and 11.

Miss Sims will have a group of her friends assisting as well as her sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank S. Sims, and her three older sisters, all of whom are expecting to be here for the party. Mrs. Peter C. Krupp [Betsy] lives in Chicago, but Mrs. John Gammie [Helen] will come from Long Island, and Mrs. Richard G. Coffin, who was Susan Sims before her marriage at the Forthnightly several years ago, will be here from her home in Lansing, Mich.

Miss Sims is having a winter free from study this year. Right now, however, she is putting in just about as long hours rehearsing for the Service club revue in which she is to do a sailor tap dance before the curtain.

This coming Thursday Mr. Sims is taking forty of his friends up to his ranch at Au Gres, Mich., for the annual fall hunt. The party will be gone most of a week, returning Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

Evanston Junior League Meets Today.

The Evanston Junior league is opening its season with a luncheon meeting at 12 o'clock today at the Georgian hotel. Mrs. Alfred Taylor, president, will outline the year's work and the names of new members will be announced. Dean Ralph Dennis of Northwestern university will speak

Dance Reform May Be Result of Pooch Ball

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

If there is a renaissance in the dance this winter in favor of sheer grace and beauty, it may be traced directly to the doorstep of Irene Castle McLaughlin. In fact the glamorous Irene may have already sounded the knell of the debutante strangle hold and the half moon circle.

It was at the Pooch ball Saturday night in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman that she, taking the floor as a dancer for the first time since her marrnage to Frederic McLaughlin, ten years ago, burlesqued the acrobatic attitude of the modern dance. Several hundred debutantes and beaux and many of their mothers and fathers laughed at and applauded the exhibition but they went home tinged with just a bit of self-consciousness about their own "attitude" on the ballroom floor. Catch them in the privacy of their boudoirs this week and you may run across some looking glass rehearsals.

The ball, given by Mrs. McLaughlin and ten of her friends for the benefit of that well known dog haven, Orphans of the Storm, was a gay and brilliant event. By midnight every one of the shadow lighted tables surrounding the dance floor was filled with a fashionable throng parading the newest in autumn fashion.

Wears Wrap of Red Velvet.

It was well after midnight, however, that Mrs. McLaughlin, vivid in a lipstick red velvet cape sheathed in chinchilla, swept on to the floor with her partner, Vernon Biddle. It was hard to believe that Mrs. McLaughlin had only met Mr. Biddle for the first time on Wednesday and practiced with him only twice thereafter.

With movement—distinguished yet never exaggerated—they waltzed to the strains of "Shadows on the Water." Under her handsome wrap which she admitted she wouldn't mind owning herself [it was only borrowed for the occasion], she revealed a white crepe gown with its skirt finely knife plaited and its cape edged in silver fox. Then came the burlesque and handclapping, round after round.

Only the Orphans of the Storm which Mrs. McLaughlin founded some ten or twelve years ago could have persuaded her to take the spotlight again after a ten year absence. But this is her favorite charity. Carefully, however, she protected herself this time against all of her friends who are continually asking her to dance by explaining beforehand that this would be her first and LAST appearance.

Contributing to the "doggy" atmosphere of the evening were the indirectly lighted ballroom murals that showed pooches and Airedales, Scotties and Good Morning!

This picture presents you with the remarkable spectacle of Victor McLaglen as a lusty but not a lusting fighting man. And, what is still more unusual, Edmund Lowe is nowhere in sight. Which last is a break. Because we could not have survived many more McLaglen and Lowe opuses like unto their last.

To the hero of "Laughing at Life" orders are the red flag that prod the bull into action.

"I make my own orders!" asserts Burke, alias McHale, alias Capt. Easter.

His penchant for being a one man government, breaks up his home, indirectly results in the death of his wife, causes him to lose sight of his little son for many years, and leads him into divers adventures in many countries.

During the exciting events that comprise his life, many femmes desire this foolhardy fighting man. But McHale—or Burke—or Easter remains staunchly true to the woman he had wed and lost. [At least he does so far as the picture shows you.]

This picture is actionful and quite colorful if not always too believable. Mr. McLaglen displays a world of vim and the ready, fighting smile that must have made him prey for the tooth paste manufacturers. Types for minor rôles were excellently chosen—I mean soldiers, citizens, etc., and players in direct support of the star get along all right.

See you tomorrow!

Women's Clubs Sponsor Two Shows.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Two women's clubs are taking advantage of the last weeks of A Century of Progress Exposition to open timely and amusing exhibits. Light and much in the mode are the delightful water colors by Julio de Diego in the Chicago Woman's Aid gallery, 185 North Wabash avenue. Scarcely less appropriate to the moment is the water color exhibition by members of the Chicago Society of Artists in the Tudor gallery of the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street.

Julio de Diego is a familiar name. It stands for painting that is modern in character, smacks of the stage, and is invariably whimsical and spirited in effect. The present show affords many outlets for De Diego's versatile talents.

He occupies himself with Spain and at once bull fights and gypsies and attractive peasants in decorative costume pour from his brush. All is in admirable taste, and if there is more froth than body to his art that also is a timely characteristic and not to be laid up too harshly against him.

A few lithographs bring a darker note into the color scheme. A suggestion of this and that other modern painter and a faint note of reminiscence which lurks about the sketchy landscape or the angular figures is almost unavoidable in painting of the modern persuasion. If Mr. de Diego did not remind us of some one else, some one else would remind us of him. It is a fair sort of art that works both ways.

We are reminded of him immediately on entering the Tudor gallery where members of the Chicago Society of Artists, numbering among them George Melville Smith, Increase Robinson, Clara MacGowan, George Lusk, Beatrice Levy, Frances Foy, Felix Russmann, and Agnes Potter Van Ryn, to name but a few, are exhibiting water colors to Oct. 27.

The same brisk and nonchalant air pervades both exhibits. The careless accuracy of statement that distorts size and makes Looking Glass creatures out of commonplace figures is cheerfully evident. It is a gay show, this, on most counts. An infrequent melancholy or drab note is nearly immediately drowned in a neighboring rush of good feeling. Color, vivacity, sometimes charm and delicacy, crudeness, carelessness, skill, something of each is present on every side and makes the exhibit one worth seeing.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

A LITTLE incident involving Dr. Alfred North Whitehead, who occupies the chair of philosophy at Harvard university and who is considered one of the greatest philosophers in the world, illustrates how impractical a philosopher can be about the affairs of everyday life. Dr. Whitehead is arriving in Chicago this week to lecture at Mandel hall tomorrow and Thursday nights. He wrote the secretary in charge of the lectures that he was arriving Sept. 9, on the 3:15 train, from Williamstown. A frenzied checkup on matters disclosed that he meant October instead of September; that he meant the 8th instead of the 9th; that no train arrived at 3:15, and that it did not come through Williamstown, anyhow.

WHILE mentioning the University of Chicago it comes to mind that Dr. Mortimer Adler, professor of the philosophy of law (perhaps you know him only as the author of the text in the book called "Diagrammatics"), is the first of the University of Chicago staff to leave the hallowed precincts of the Midway for the north side. Dr. and Mrs. Adler have taken an apartment at 20 Cedar street. . . . One of the interesting features of the exhibit of the work of Maud Hutchins to be held at the Chester Johnson galleries Friday afternoon is her "portrait in profile" of Dr. Adler. Only it isn't a portrait, if you interpret portrait to mean a likeness. And it is likely to create as much discussion as his "Diagrammatics."

WHEN Chauncey McCormick was honored by the French government at the Casino last week, an observer noticed that Mr. Walter Dill Scott slipped the medal into the hand of the French ambassador. The president of Northwestern university received a similar honor the day before and a good guess would have it that the ambassador forgot to bring more than one decoration with him.

LEGIONNAIRE eyeful. The fellow who traversed the Midway carrying a large and shabby boot, announcing that he was looking for Cinderella.

THE GOSSIP SHOP. A honeymoon pair in town last week to see the Fair were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Booth. Mr. Booth is one of the twin grandsons of the late J. R. Booth of Ottawa, and it was his sister who married Prince Eric of Denmark. His bride is an attractive New Yorker, blonde and chic. They departed Saturday for California, where they will live, returning through Chicago in December on their way to New York to meet Mr. Booth's mother, who has been visiting in Denmark. The last functions in their honor before they left were a cocktail party at the home of Mrs. Charles Ervin on Cedar street and a dinner given at the World's Fair by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Burnham. . . . A well known young woman went down to her bank the other day to arrange to borrow some money and when the young man who handles her affairs asked her how long she wanted it for, she told him it really was none of his business. . . . Certain experimental minded folk are making their own liqueur by putting equal parts of gin, sugar, and damson plums in a jar and allowing it to stand until fermented. . . . The thrush or linnet picked up on West Madison street at Franklin is doing nicely and apparently doesn't care how long he lives in a cage if he is fed plenty of apple. He refuses birdseed and bread, but goes for oatmeal and apple eagerly.

New Rhythms Produced by Negro Troupe

Ashantis Give Ceremonial Dances, Songs.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

If the Punch and Judy theater continues to give Sunday revues as it did yesterday afternoon and evening, it ought to become one of the most interesting places in all Chicago. For here was Negro music, not only American, but African.

The Royal Ashanti ceremonial dancers, singers, and drummers under the leadership of Duke Kwesi Kuntu led the bill, and gave a half hour program of what was indicated in their title. It was worthwhile as picture and as music. A troupe of active, muscular musicians, all bared to the waist except the duke, who draped an ornamental robe toga-wise over his shoulders and sat under a huge umbrella of green and yellow triangles with red border, presented a program that became more fascinating as it went along.

There were some seventeen drums to be played at one time or another, and if you think you know something about complex rhythms, you should find out how much more these artists know about them. The Ashantis must have invented syncopation. Anyway they have developed it into fractions and multiples such as you must hear to believe. Meanwhile, there was singing, native songs in, mark you well, four part harmony, simple but excellent.

The dancing varied from athletic leaps to frenzied footwork. Some seemed to be there for their own sake, some were varied with talk—which I did not understand—oration, dialogue, or antiphony, and there was at least one rather gruesomely realistic scene of a man sentenced to death before the duke's throne and slaughtered with a knife forthwith.

After this the American Negro program, the Deep River quartet, another group of dancers, a pianist, and whatnot, seemed just a trifle tame.

Guard Tibbett from Rush of Girl Admirers

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Lawrence Tibbett has too much male "IT" for his own good; at any rate, L. E. Behymer, who is handling Tibbett's presentation of "Emperor Jones" here shortly, is tendering him a bodyguard during his Los Angeles stage run.

"Not to protect him from kidnapers, but to keep the girls away from Lawrence," Behymer says. "We don't want any trouble like that where the two debutantes chased him in their automobile up in San Francisco."

Giuseppe Mantovani, basso, who has done some operatic singing hereabouts, gave a song recital at the Studebaker yesterday afternoon, displaying a fine voice, the gift of singing in several languages, including English, and a well learned répertoire of songs as well as arias. He was assisted by Anne Cierpik, soprano, who excelled in the singing of Polish songs and in the display of coloratura pyrotechnics. Both artists were received with well deserved applause.

Cleo Wade, Negro soprano, possessed of an uncommonly pleasant voice, was presented in recital at Kimball hall yesterday afternoon by the music department of the Metropolitan church, of which J. Wesley Jones is the director. Here was singing clear and true, excellent English, and a considerable list of agreeable, unhackneyed songs. She was assisted by the Metropolitan Choir Treble Glee club, a group of singers who performed with fine discipline and an abundance of high spirits.

The Operatic Art theater, which has been appearing at the Goodman theater, has canceled the remainder of its season. There is word that it is under process of reorganization.

SYNOPSIS.

Sheila, known as "Bun" O'Reilly, an American, makes a comfortable living abroad by helping fellow countrymen out of difficulties. Fred Crawford, an American working on a Paris newspaper, is her friend and counselor. Bun received a 'phone call from Mrs. Thelma Craymer, a stranger, who mentions a mutual friend. Bun agrees to have luncheon at her apartment. She is admitted by an ominous appearing butler. She takes an immediate dislike to Mrs. Craymer, but is favorably impressed by her uncle, James B. Finlay, a wealthy American. Finlay wants Bun to help find his young wife, Helene. He wants no publicity. He had met Helene after the war in Bucharest. She returned annually to visit her family, the Bobianoffs, installed by Finlay in a villa on the Riviera. Her brother, Ferenz, he had brought to America. The last time Helene returned she disappeared, and no trace can be found of her or her parents. Bun agrees and accepts 200,000 francs in advance. A recent newspaper picture, showing Helene standing with a tall woman in a group at Biarritz is the only clue Bun has to go on. That evening Bun has dinner with Fred Crawford and tells him of her strange commission.

MURDER AND ROBBERY.

Crawford returned to the photograph. "Hmm. It's all a sort of yes-yes affair. She's lovely. She's more than that. There's a glamour—if you'll forgive the expression. I'm not surprised the old gaga doesn't want to lose her. Let's change the metaphor—and say it's the sort of face that brought down a thousand airplanes."

"If you don't mind eliminating useless enthusiasms—do you think it's a sincere face? Would you trust her?"

"If you mean do I think she's ditched the old fellow—no. I'd swear she's not that sort. Bun, there's something else to this story that you haven't found out."

"Of course there is—heaps."

"Yes—but what?"

"That's for me to find out. I'm going to run down that tall woman in this group and see what she knows."

Crawford considered this. "It sounds easy enough. I wonder if it will be."

"And then," Bun went on, "I suppose a trip to Rumania is indicated. There's something fishy about the consul writing that he could find out nothing about the Bobianoff family."

"It is more fishy, as you so elegantly put it, that the family has left their villa at Grasse. Did you find out how much they were being staked for?"

"Twenty thousand a year—dollars, not francs."

"For an American family, too, these days."

"I can't see them disappearing and giving up a sum like that for nothing. As I said, Bun, there's more in this than you imagine."

She ran to the maid's room, threw the door open, and found Liberte lying on the floor, her eyes flashing with fury but her lips silent beneath a heavy bandage.

"There couldn't be. I'm imagining all sorts of things. I've been going over the whole show ever since I heard the story. To begin with, those actually here in Paris. Thelma and hubby. Thelma may know something she's not telling. She's stupid—but she's not dumb. And I'm perfectly convinced she's receiving her fat income from Uncle Jim. It's not at all farfetched to see her glad to have a rich uncle safely rid of a young wife who will, of course, inherit the fortune. These young wives always do, don't they! No, I'm not creating suspicions out of whole cloth. I'm just lining them all up. There's a butler, of course. Did I mention him—a man with a scarred face? His type has been a little overworked, so I'm leaving him for later consideration. But he was in the room when Uncle Jim opened his sesame and handed me the eight grand. Then—that brother in America—wife's brother. The old fellow apparently has all the confidence in the world in him. His own son, too. What is his attitude towards young wife? Think it over, Fred. I need a leading light—badly."

Crawford lighted a cigaret; then he ran his hand through his somewhat unmanageable hair and looked off into the wood with its glimmering lights.

"Of course, it's your own affair—whether you'll go in for a thing like this or not. Personally, if you ask my advice, I'd say hands off. There's no telling what sort of a mixup it may lead you into. My feeling about these cases in which men's wives leave them is that they are better handled by the people involved. I've tried once or twice to help out in certain marital difficulties among my friends. They were never my friends afterwards."

"But this is so entirely impersonal. I don't know any of them. I'm an outsider. There's no telling but that I've stumbled on my real profession. Now don't tell me women have never made good detectives. When it comes to spies we hold the palm."

"And usually get shot for your trouble."

"Do you see me getting shot, Fred?"

Crawford's eyes showed a shade of anxiety. "I see you getting mixed up in something that's not your affair. What you ought to do is to tell Mr. Finlay to put his case in the hands of the French authorities. This is their country and they know how to run it."

Once more Bun's chin went out with determination. "Give up my Norman manoir—never!" She lighted a fresh cigaret and leaned back in her chair. "O, well—that's that. So you are not going to help me."

"I'm going to help you to the hilt. That's what I'm living for. But——"

Bun signaled the waiter and asked him to bring a backgammon board. "Let's have a game. I want to give my brain a rest. I've been mulling over this subject for the last four hours."

A little later, when the waiter returned, he told Crawford that he was wanted on the telephone. When he came back Bun was quick to notice his grave expression.

"What did you say your friend's name was—Finlay?"

"Yes—James B. But why?"

Crawford looked at his watch. "I've got to beat it back into town at once. A Mr. James B. Finlay has just been found dead in his room at the hotel—presumably murdered."

In less than fifteen minutes Bun stopped her car a short distance from the entrance to the hotel—Crawford's suggestion.

"Now—look here, Bun. Whether you want to or not—you've got to take my advice. You've got yourself into a ticklish position. If Finlay has been murdered there's one fact that hits between the eyes — and it will other people, too. He gave you two hundred thousand francs today. Thank God it wasn't a check. But two people saw him give it to you—that Mrs. Craymer and her butler. Of course, that's the first thing they're going to tell the police. Now what I want you to do is to go straight home, get that money from Liberté, and carry it about with you until you see me. You'd better wait up for me. As soon as I get the dope from this hotel I'll blow by and tell you what's what. Do you get me?"

Bun nodded. For the first time that day she began to see the whole affair as something she wished she had washed her hands of. She drove straight to the garage, turned her car over to a sleepy night watchman, and walked the two blocks to her apartment. As she slipped the key into the lock of her own door she glanced at her wrist watch. It was a quarter past eleven. Once within the apartment she was amazed to find all the lights turned on. Could Liberté have decided to give a ball during her absence? But there was no sound. The silence was even more ominous on account of the brilliant illumination. She hurried into her own bedroom. That, too, was flooded with light. One glance about made her stop with an icy alarm. Everything pointed to the fact that the room had been torn to pieces in a search for something. She called for Liberté—and got no response. She ran to the maid's room, threw the door open, and found Liberté lying on the floor, her eyes flashing with fury but her lips silent beneath a heavy bandage. Even before Bun had released the tied feet and hands a torrent of flamboyant Latin curses were filling the room.

"Sales cochons! Sacré nom d'un chien! They got it. It was there—under my pillow! But I saw them! I would know them in purgatory itself! Crotte de pique! Mademoiselle, we shall find them—both of them—the man and the chameau of a woman with him!"

ELLEN: WHITE POWDER LOOKS ghastly on skin, no matter how fair it may be. For the fair skin there are soft flesh, pale rachels, and ivory tints that should be expertly matched. Cosmetic shops extend this service nowadays.

DANNY: Eating too much of meat, fish, eggs, oysters, fowl, and cereal products, and not enough of tomatoes, fruits, leafy vegetables, peas, beans (fresh or dried), and milk produces an acid condition. Strive for a balanced diet to offset acidity.

for the community chest campaign. Several of the league members volunteer their services each year to help in the campaign.

The Evanston league is celebrating the tenth anniversary of its founding at this meeting and the members, particularly the older ones, are delighted that they will have with them one of the charter members and a former president, Mrs. Frederick P. Ives of Cohasset, Mass., who is visiting on the north shore now. Formerly Adele Hall, Mrs. Ives and her husband have been missed greatly by their many friends on the north shore since they moved east.

The Dental dispensary, which the league maintains, was moved last year to larger quarters at 845 Chicago avenue, Evanston, and it has become such an important factor in the community that the public schools have asked the Junior league to take over all the dental work in the Evanston schools this year. This will mean considerable expansion and so far the league has not decided whether to undertake it just now. Last year the clinic took care of 1,500 children.

This year, instead of launching a campaign for money for the clinic and the other obligations the league has, the quota plan was adopted and each member has to raise a certain amount of money.

There is to be a tea for the new league members on the 18th at the home of Mrs. William H. Colvin, 1100 Forest avenue, Evanston.

Service Club to Hold Cabaret Party.

Debutantes, Service club members and the younger set in general had their fears set at rest when they learned that the Service club is to have a cabaret party after the Service club show this year just as it always has had. There was so much delay in announcing the date and the place of the supper dance that every one was worried for fear it would be omitted. The party, which is always one of the gayest and most popular of the fall season, will be held Saturday night after the second performance of "Dancing Debs," in either the Red Lacquer room or the ballroom of the Palmer house.

Miss Caroline McNair is in charge of arrangements for the cabaret, just as her sister, Mrs. Frank S. Sims, is handling tickets for the two performances of "Dancing Debs," Friday and Saturday nights at the Goodman theater.

Miss McNair to Give Halloween Party.

Miss McNair, incidentally, is putting invitations into the mail today for a Halloween party that will be more of a barn dance than a witch and ghost party, and which will not take place on Halloween, but on the 20th of the month.

She has requested the two hundred guests she is inviting to come clothed as farmers or milk maids, so that they will be prepared to jump in the hay, brandish a pitchfork, bob for apples, or spend a more sophisticated evening dancing in the lantern light. At any rate, a week from Friday night will see a good many cars starting from the north side for the short run out to Wayne, where Miss McNair's "scouts" have finally located a barn that has been proclaimed perfect for just such a party.

Society to Attend Auditorium Opera.

Many of the city's well known patrons of music who have lent glamour and distinction to the old Auditorium's golden horseshoe during former opera seasons will return tonight for the special performance of "Madame Butterfly" the San Carlo Opera company is to present. The Butterfly is to be the young Japanese soprano, Hizi Koyke, who has already won many friends and admirers here. Pinkerton, the American officer, will be sung by Dimitri Onofrei.

Conveniences to Be Open Today.

Mrs. Frank Hibbard's Conveniences, which she runs for charity, will be open today. In addition to all the other services that the little bureau offers, this year it will carry a line of smart harnesses and leashes for dogs. Plucking, bathing, trimming, and walking dogs are among the most popular services Conveniences supplies.

Mrs. Hibbard, not long home from a summer at Watch Hill, is terribly perturbed because the telephone number of her little shop has been left out of the new book, so she asked that we remind every one that it is Superior 4343. Miss Elizabeth Ricker, just home from a summer on the William B. Greenlee ranch in New York, will be with Mrs. Hibbard again this year.

Stoddard Portraits Will Be Shown Today.

The portraits of Mrs. Helen Walton, John and Nicholas Noyes, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Noyes, and Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum are among those of Chicagoans that will be shown today when the exhibit of F. Enid Stoddard, the celebrated English portrait artist, opens in the French room of the Blackstone hotel.

Mrs. Baum will open the interesting display of miniatures, water colors, and tinted pencil portraits at 4 o'clock. Then Horace Bridges will speak briefly.

Miss Stoddard's last exhibition was given at Cartier's in New York and was opened by Lady Armstrong and M. Pierre Cartier. At her last London exhibition the marquis and marchioness of Carisbrooke brought the queen of Spain. Then her British majesty, Queen Mary, commanded that the exhibition be brought to Buckingham palace to be shown there. Miss Stoddard has "done" the duchess of York and Princess Mary's children, also Lady Mountbatten, the Viscountess Curzon, and Lord Allenby.

Mrs. Franklin M. Miller is entertaining at tea this afternoon at her apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive for Miss Janet Fairbank and Miss Pauline Frederick, whose engagement on a local stage closes this week. Mrs. Miller's guests will be the members of the Northern Illinois branch of the League of American Pen Women.

Paris Brings a Tawny Richness to Winter Suits

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS. — [Special.] — Styles are, like morals, a matter of climate, more or less. In Paris, where the weather is clammy, but never zero, women can get around in cloth suits all winter long, and with the fur-trimmed suit so big in French fashions this season, smart women wear it shopping and, in fact all day around.

A pet color scheme for the fur trimmed suit is a combination of tawny red and tawny brown. Warm colors raise the temperature of the spirit, even if they don't do anything for that of the body. The tawny red that is so smart here is a cross between brique and tomato, and when these two shades meet you get a luscious result. The Lucile Paray suit, shown here, is that shade, and in a downy woolen that gives it full value. The fur is tawny brown caracul, and is used to border the wide collar and the peplum of the jacket. It also makes a hem on the slim skirt. Fur hems are excessively smart this fall.

The skirt of this model has a full length front panel, cut in one with a slightly flared flounce from the knees to the hem at the sides. In this way the fur hem looks like it was stiffened a bit. The peplum also gives the same effect, and emphasizes the slenderness of the waistline, which is held by a brown stitched leather belt with a gold buckle.

You Can Strut or Snuggle in New Fur Coats

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Now that the fashion shows are over you can settle down to spending money for things that will give you a thrill to unpack . . . you can sink your savings in a fur coat that is unquestionably the most alluring fur model that has been designed in seasons . . . New fur coats have a distinct flair for being different this year.

You will find creations with rather intricate but infinitely becoming shoulder sections, very slim and youthful with simple silhouettes that won't date the thing next fall; you will find snappy sports fur coats that reach smartly just to knee, that you can wear for a shopping dash to town or for any daytime event, as well as a snug comforter in the grandstand while you feverishly watch some bulbously padded giant streak down the field.

Sooty black sealskins are getting the high fashion spotlight . . . they are no longer the deadly dull things that wrapped themselves fulsomely around the shivering form of ancient dames who lived years ago . . . they are superlatively smart and designed to literally skin inches and inches from the anatomy. You can find them with flared military collars that will shut off any breeze, or with the widest outsize ascot tie-collar effects to spread handsomely high and fashionably across your chest.

Belts of wide swagger leather are cinched in tight around the middle of fitted, amazingly thin looking models. What they haven't managed to do with this effective sealskin is decidedly negligible . . . you can find any style and creation you ever dreamed about.

St. Bernard Dog Collects Gifts.

The most popular guest at the party was the McLaughlins' handsome St. Bernard dog, Peter. He circulated through the ballroom collecting nickels and dimes in his collar treasury for the Orphans of the Storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Marston of New York who have spent the last week in Chicago visiting their son and daughter-in-law, the Edgar L. Marstons, attended the ball with Mrs. George Nichols, their hostess. Before the party Mrs. Nichols entertained at dinner for them, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Hutchins, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene V. R. Thayer, I. Newton Perry, and Mr. and Mrs. John A. Stevenson.

Dinner and the theater was the before the ball bill of the George Richardsons, the Robert A. Gardners, the Mason Phelpses, and the Stanley Keiths who had organized themselves into one of the interesting Dutch treat parties. Mrs. Richardson was stunning in a beige lace gown with a short jacket of cherry velvet.

Likewise dinner and the theater was the order of the evening for an even larger Dutch treat party that included the Charles B. Goodspeeds, Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Paepcke, the senior Byron Harveys, the Lawrence Williamses, the Thomas H. Fishers, Philip Allen, a popular bachelor who has just taken up residence in Chicago; the Edward H. Bennetts, Mrs. Howard Linn's brothers, Seymour Blair, Baron von Wrangel, who is also here to stay, and Brazil's stunning representative to A Century of Progress, Mrs. James Miller.

Black and White Dominates Fashions.

Vivacious, dark eyed Betty Ofield was lovely in a black velvet gown with an ermine edged peplum and an ermine cape. Orchids were her shoulder corsage.

Black and white, ever stunning, seemed to dominate the fashion parade for it was impossible to count the number of stunning ensembles of black velvet and ermine. One of the loveliest was worn by Mrs. Francis Johnson who enjoyed dinner before the ball at the Bryan Reids with the Frank Wilhelms, the Huntington Henrys, and Howard Gillette.

Mrs. Robert McCormick Adams wore a brown empire velvet wrap snugly fastened under her chin. Her gown was a black crêpe modernistically patterned in gold. After a trip to the Fair early in the evening the Philip D. Armours arrived with their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Eugene Sawyer of Dedham, Mass., the Edmund S. Twinings and the Kenneth O'Briens of New York. The party to which the Alexander Kirks were host and hostesses was one of those that had started its merrymaking in the afternoon at the Saddle and Cycle tennis tournament.

The John Andrews Kings and the Howard Linns had tables not far apart and near them sat the Herbert McLaughlins with the junior George Chappells, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin II., and Miss Nancy Allen Allen of Hartford, Conn., who is visiting on the north shore.

Two of the loveliest satin gowns were worn by Miss Adelaide Atkin and Miss Ann Small. Miss Barbara Graf was gowned in crimson velvet with orchids for her only decoration while Miss Nancy Traylor was wearing a striking gown of gold cloth.

Grandmothers Often Destroy Child's Morale

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

More and more often do I hear the details of troubles that arise from the doubling up of families; that is, of the younger generation with the older. These letters contain no complaints—people who are affected by the depression don't do much complaining.

So it is not complaints that these letters contain but the simple statement of how going to live with grandparents has caused the young children to develop real behavior problems—and an appeal for advice.

Well, to be quite honest and not at all pessimistic, I think it is a difficult matter to straighten out. Raising children can be classed with religion and politics in that it is almost impossible to change people's opinions on that subject.

There are grandparents who feel that because they have raised one family they know all there is to know about children—but who never knew very much at any stage of the game! They love their little grandchildren but take a kind of pleasure in them that is more for their own selfish indulgence than for the real well-being of the children.

As to advice—well, it is difficult to give advice from outside the picture. About all I can do is to appeal here to the grandmothers and to suggest that both the grandmother and the mother try to meet each other half way so that the small beloved bone of contention shall not be a victim of their strife.

Violet and Green in Dainty Design Appeals to Girls

Violets.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Have you a little lavender and green bedroom in your home? If you have here is a design for the quilt that will be its finishing touch. The lovely blue purples of the real violet make the flower, with green for the stems and leaves.

For a quilt pattern of this design send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

Good Revues Presented at Film Houses

Critic Declares New Policy Is Welcome Change.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

An advance toward the best standards of revue entertainment, as practiced on the so-called legitimate stage, is to be noted this week at the Chicago and Palace theaters, which are supplementing their cinema programs with well organized and handsomely staged shows of the Broadway type. This is a welcome change from the casual vaudeville bills based on the cabaret or "master of ceremonies" technique, which have been standard procedure in the continuous performances at these cinema houses.

"Crazy Quilt," which may be seen at the Chicago, is a new production trade marked with a title that Impresario Billy Rose, husband of Fannie Brice, has adopted for his song and dance entertainments. It gives Anita Page, of film renown, her debut as a stage actress, but the burden of the performance is carried by the other performers. Miss Page's chief purpose is to look like a Hollywood queen, glamorously blonde.

Charles King, leading man of many musical comedies in the George M. Cohan pattern, is the spokesman for the principals and chief singer. Ann Pennington, whose dimpled knees are a legend in the land, shakes herself in various American folk dances. Smith and Dale are vigorous conversational comedians in the Potash and Perlmutter style. Cardini, an English sleight of hand performer who works with packs of cards and lighted cigarets, is an important contributor to the amusement.

In "Strike Me Pink," at the Palace theater, one may find a skeletonized but lively version of the musical comedy that had a long run on Broadway last season and put its title song as well as its ballad, "Let's Call It a Day," into the cabaret and radio repertories. The plot, if any, has disappeared, but the best numbers and a few of the "black-outs" remain to carry on the tradition.

James Barton, a versatile comedian of topnotch rating, supplants but does not imitate Jimmy Durante. [A lesser comic, wearing a beak like Cyrano's, performs that duty.] Barton illustrates the difference between a highly skilled performance and the impromptu blather that such fellows as Milton Berle and Lou Holtz have been handing out to the Palace audiences. He is an artist; they are merely remorseless buffoons, feverish with egomania.

A gifted and winsome little Mexican girl out of the revues named Armida replaces the hot-cha Lupe Velez of the New York company, and also illustrates the value of mimetic skill and stage training over untutored bouncing. Leota Lane is the singing girl of the show, which has a charming score. A well trained and handsomely costumed chorus goes through many pretty paces.

If bookings of this sort become a permanent policy at the capacious cinema theaters, printed programs will be in order. These shows represent an alliance between film exhibitions and the legitimate stage, and the movie house theory that its customers are unable or unwilling to read does not apply in such instances.

"Bittersweet," the operetta by Noel Coward, will begin an engagement at the Grand Opera house Sunday night, Nov. 5.

BY MARY MEADE.

'S funny, but many of us seem to have the idea that, since our great-great-grandmamas served cranberries at that first Thanksgiving feast for a meat accompaniment it's the only use for them. But the fact is that this tart, flavorful fruit may be used for any course of a meal, from soup to after dinner candies, its cheery red giving dishes an attractiveness few other foods can boast.

Cranberry "sauce" itself may be made in four different ways. Each one has its school of loyal supporters. First, some housewives prepare their sauce, with the berries floating separate in the juice; others prefer the sauce thick and jellied; some drain the juice from the sauce to make jelly by itself, while others force the cranberry pulp through a sieve before adding the sugar, thus giving a jamlike cranberry treat.

Cranberry soup is a tempting starter for a meal and may be served either hot or cold.

CRANBERRY SOUP.

2 cups cranberries
2 cups water
1 tablespoon quick cooking tapioca
¼ inch piece stick cinnamon
2 slices lemon
1 cup sugar
1 egg yolk

Boil the berries in the water until tender. Strain. Add the tapioca, cinnamon, and lemon to the juice and cook until the tapioca is clear. Then add the sugar and remove mixture from the burner. Beat the egg yolk and pour the hot soup over it slowly. Serve at once or chill before serving.

CRANBERRY REFRIGERATOR CAKE.

2 cups cranberry sauce
1 egg white
½ cup chopped nut meats
1 sponge cake
½ cup whipping cream

Beat the egg white until stiff, combine with the cranberry sauce, and fold in the chopped nut meats. Slice layers of the sponge cake to fit a loaf pan. Alternate layers of the cake and the sauce until the pan is full, finishing with a layer of cake. Place a weight on top and let stand in the refrigerator 8 hours. Unmold, garnish with whipped cream, and cut in slices to serve.

WOMAN'S OR MISS' DRESS.

This lovely model is equally suited to maid or matron. Epaulets give the idea of the new drop shoulders, and the paneled front with the tricky cut through the hips gives an unusually slim line to the skirt. For girls and youthful type women a rust plaited hairy woolen weave with white bengaline for contrast will be smart, while for the older woman there is nothing smarter than a modish black woolen with white shiny satin trim.

The pattern, No. 2928, comes in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years, and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure.

Excess Pounders Cheat Altar Vow by Getting Fat

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

If a man promises to love, cherish, protect, support, and so on, unto death, a beautiful young thing of 125 pounds or thereabout, what becomes of that gentleman's responsibility should said blushing bride develop into a 175 pounder or more?

The question suggests itself in reading "Youth Again," by Thomas J. Walsh, who has had many years' experience in handling overweight problems. One infers that Mr. Walsh feels the girls who "go heavy" on the trusting mate are cheating on their end of the troth. He says:

"When a fellow leads his blushing, slender bride to the altar, and gladly vows to protect and cherish her to his final day, he cannot be expected to anticipate the constant succession of surprises which confront him if he sees the trim silhouette he loved to contemplate give way to a buxomness never reckoned as a possibility at the outset."

Elimination importance in fighting weight excess is stressed over and over again by this first hand observer of weight reductions. Getting rid of acid and toxic wastes by an alkaline purge is one of his commendable recommendations. This is presented in the form of a three day fruit juice diet at the start, taken once every 30 or 60 days.

The three day program suggested by our authority outlines: First day: a glass of hot water with juice of one-half lemon. Fifteen minutes, or half-hour later, a cup of hot tea or plain coffee. Then a half-hour after that, and every two hours thereafter throughout the day and evening, a full glass made from the juice of six oranges, juice of three lemons and one-half can of unsweetened pineapple juice, to which is added an equal amount of water. This same routine is followed the second day. Third day is the same until evening, when the fast is broken with a meal consisting of two or three cooked vegetables or large salad. Next day normal eating is resumed, being careful of what you eat, of course.

MINUTE MYSTERY
By H. A. RIPLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MURDER MADNESS.

"He was murdered by a woman, all right—no question about that," Sergt. Reynolds said with a glance at Prof. Fordney that bespoke commendation on his perceptive powers.

"You see," he continued, opening the left hand of Arlington Blythe in which was clutched by the roots nine long strands of beautiful blonde hair. "I know that Blythe has for sometime been going with Diane Evers, the blonde dancer at the Café Paris. He has millions and he spent money lavishly on her until he met that dark Mexican wench a few weeks ago."

Fordney, who had been studying the book shelves, turned and raised his eyebrows.

"I know all these night club people," Reynolds replied to the unspoken question, "It's my business to. I'll bet Diane's alibi is a phony, and this is what happened. . . ."

The professor again examined the small hole over the heart in Blythe's buttoned coat and the scratches on his face, went back to the bookshelves and took down a volume relating famous poison cases, while the detective sergeant continued.

"Evers came here tonight and had an argument with Blythe over his attentions to the Mexican. When he made it clear he was through with her she fought him, scratching his face, and when she found she couldn't best him physically shot him, but in the struggle for the gun Blythe grabbed her hair—and that's what'll hang her!" Reynolds looked very complacent.

Fordney put a marker in the book, laid it down and said, "I'm afraid you're wrong son. Look here. . . ."

... are the hardest

Of course you smile—we want you to—but think of those words in relation to the history of Chicago—and they take on a very serious significance. For Chicago is only now celebrating her 100th birthday—and while she smiles to think how well she has come through—the hardships are still very fresh in her memory. She hasn't forgotten the struggle it was to turn dismal swamps into public parks—and long stretches of mud flats into miles of smooth white boulevard.

She hasn't forgotten the desolation that followed the great fire of 1871—and she gives herself a pardonable pat on the back as she remembers with what speed and courage the rebuilding took place. She has stood up to the demands of three great wars with a stanchness worthy of an older city.

She has known panics—and known them well—trust her to match any set of reminiscences about the grim days of '73, '93, and 1907—but she has managed to face down the adversary every time, and has emerged from each encounter stronger than ever, and with a broader vision.

And now for the second time in her history—true to her perfect sense of the dramatic—she stages a world exposition in the midst of a world depression—this great Century of Progress!

We think it's up to State Street—the best known of her many thoroughfares—to pay her special tribute—so we are planning a great holiday week packed with values as spectacular as even her "big scale" view of things could demand. In her honor we open with

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—A brilliant aerial attack, engineered by the Chicago Bears was too much for the Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets field today and enabled the visitors to romp off the field with a 10 to 0 victory.

JACK MANDERS.

The game marked the opening of the National Professional league season at Brooklyn, and 20,000 fans turned out to see Red Cagle and Shipwreck Kelly make their debuts in the Red and White uniform.

By its victory Chicago, undefeated in league competition, gained undisputed possession of first place.

Bears Best in Air.

The teams were fairly evenly matched in the matter of first downs, the Bears making 10 to Brooklyn's 8. The Dodgers outrushed the Bears, gaining a total of 88 yards to 68. Overhead, however, the Bears showed marked superiority, making eight of the first downs with forward passes, netting 141 yards, whereas Brooklyn could gain only 24 yards by its passes.

An intercepted pass put the Bears in a scoring position in the second quarter, Bill Karr, former West Virginia star, caught one of Red Cagle's passes and ran 10 yards to the Brooklyn 27 yard line.

Three plays netted only two yards. On the spread formation Carl Brumbaugh faded back and shot a long forward to Karr, who stepped over the line for the touchdown. Brumbaugh then held the ball for Bronko Nagurski to place kick the extra point.

Manders Kicks Field Goal.

The only other score came in the third quarter when Chicago reeled off two first downs in succession to advance the ball 31 yards to the Brooklyn 28 yard line. Three plays produced only three yards. Then Jack Manders, former Minnesota star playing his first year of professional football, dropped back and with Molesworth holding the ball on the 35 yard line, booted a field goal.

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 8.—Green Bay Packers scored a smashing 17 to 0 victory over the Spartans from Portsmouth, O., here this afternoon to reassure their partisans that the national professional football race is far from over. Nearly 5,000 fans sat through the battle in a heavy rain which fell throughout the second half, and moreover they were on hand for the opening kickoff although rain had fallen for more than 24 hours before the game.

Pools of water, in a series of connecting lakes from goal to goal, offered extraordinary handicaps for the players. Just why any one would attend a game under these conditions is difficult to understand, especially since the Packers had lost two games and tied another. Today's victory was their first.

Cincinnati Guard Earns a Draw in Fight.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Joe Lillard, Negro half back, kicked a field goal to give the Chicago Cardinals a 3 to 0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in the opening of the National professional football league season at Redland field this afternoon. A heavy rain, which delayed the start of the game more than 20 minutes, held the opening day crowd to less than 1,500.

Near the end of the game Lester Caywood, husky Cincinnati guard, and Lillard started a fight. Joe landed a right uppercut to Lester's prominent chin and Lester retaliated with a blow that sent Lillard to the turf. Both were ordered from the field by the officials.

Cards March 43 Yards.

The first quarter was marred by frequent fumbles by both teams, due to the slippery going and the wet ball. But in the closing minutes of the second quarter the Cardinals got into scoring position with a 43 yard march. The Reds braced and held the Cardinals for three downs on their seven yard line. On the fourth down and with less than two minutes to play in the half, Lillard dropped back to the 17 yard line and booted a field goal between the uprights.

Lillard was the sparkplug of the Cardinal march which ended with his field goal. He started it with a nine yard jog off right tackle. He then passed twice to Rogge, Cardinal end, for 25 yards.

Cincinnati Kick Fails.

In the first quarter the Reds appeared to be going places when they made two first downs, one on a 12 yard jaunt by Seaman Squyres and another on a 15 yard pass, Algy Clark to Joe Crakes. Hilary Lee, formerly of the University of Oklahoma, attempted a place kick from the 39 yard line. Chicago players sifted through and blocked the ball.

Again in the fourth quarter the Reds drove into Cardinal territory, aided by two penalties and a 15 yard pass, Clark to Corzine. Then Lee missed another place kick.

BOSTON, 21; GIANTS, 20

Boston, Mass., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Boston Redskins opened their National Professional Football league home season today by defeating the New York Giants, 21 to 20, before 15,000 at Fenway Park.

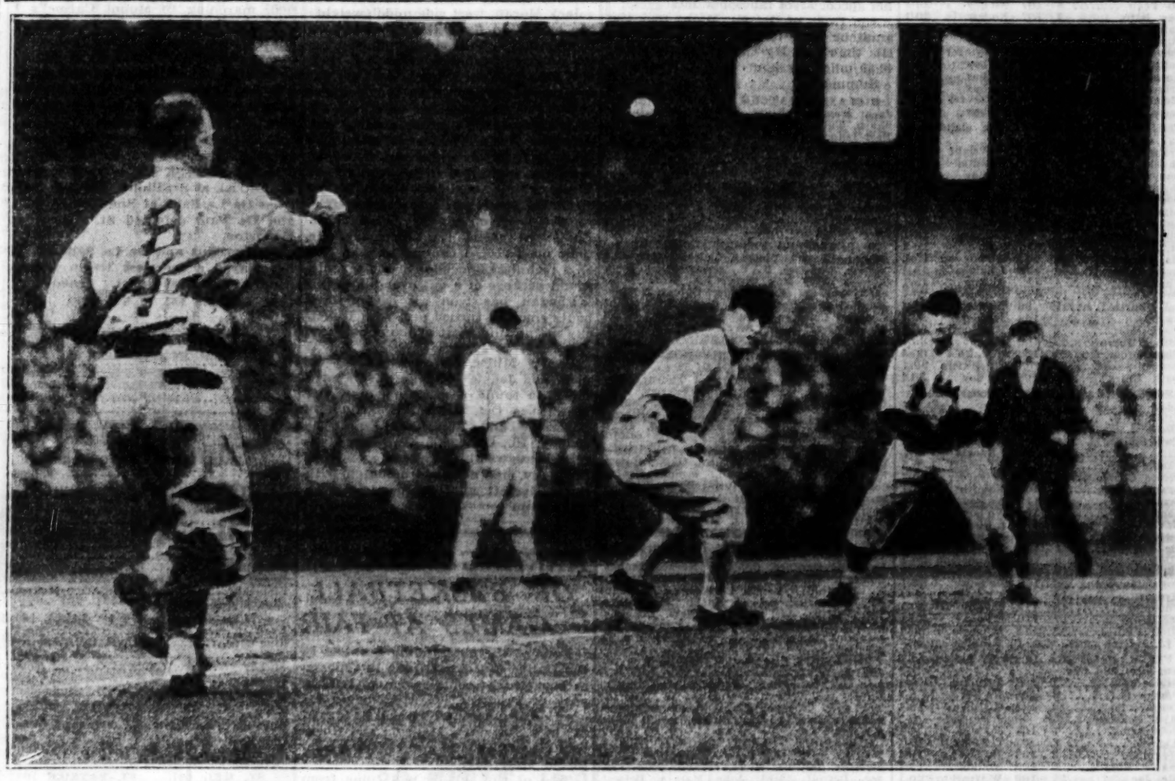
Glen Edwards, Redskin tackle, ruined the Giants' chances for a tie by blocking Harry Newman's placekick for extra point in the third period after Stew Clancy battered the Boston line for 15 yards and a touchdown. Clancy put the Giants in scoring position by completing a 35 yard pass to Ray Flaherty.

The Giants opened the scoring in the first period. After Len Grant recovered Jim Musick's fumble on the Redskins' 10 yard line, Bo Molenda slipped inside his right tackle for the touchdown and Newman place kicked the extra point.

The Redskins were held for downs twice inside of the Giants' 15 yard line before they started scoring in the second quarter. A pass from Marger Aspit to Musick put the ball on the Giants' 20 yard line and Musick plunged the rest of the way. A 50 yard run by Louis Weller gave the Redskins the lead.

The Redskins also scored in the third period on a march from midfield led by Musick and Cliff Battles and in the final session, Newman, after losing 10 yards on a lateral pass play, reversed his field and ran 90 yards for the Giants' final touchdown.

AND THUS ENDS THE CITY SERIES OF 1933



Al Simmons is trapped between third and home after Red Kress' grounder in the first inning of the fourth and final game of the city series yesterday at Comiskey park. Gabby Hartnett is throwing the ball to Woody English during the run down that retired the slugging Sox outfielder. Simmons had tripled to score the second Sox run of the inning. Joe Heving's pitching stopped the Cubs, and the Sox won, 5 to 1, to sweep the series.

Andy Gantner Wins Amateur Outboard Title

Andy Gantner of Chicago won the Commander Eugene F. McDonald trophy, emblematic of the amateur outboard championship of the central west, yesterday at the annual national outboard regatta held in the north Lagoon of A Century of Progress.

Gantner, driving a consistent race, averaged 44.45 miles an hour elapsed time over the 10 mile course. The race was run in two heats. His time was 13:24.7.

Horace Tennes of Chicago, several times winner of the trophy, and the favorite to repeat, led the field of seven drivers during the first heat, but was off to a bad start in the second heat in which he finished fifth for second place.

Thousands See Finals.

Thousands of visitors to A Century of Progress viewed the finals from the rows of stands on the west side of the lagoon. Many looked on from the sky towers and from the rocket cars.

Others, expecting spills, jammed the bridges near the north and south turns. Only two minor spills occured. Jim Coutry of Winnetka went into the water during the second heat of the amateur class race in the runabout division, but managed to finish in fourth place on elapsed time.

Besides the McDonald trophy, championships were determined yesterday in both divisions of the B, F, and runabout classes.

Jack Maypole of River Forest won the amateur championship in the B class. Under better racing conditions than on the opening day of the meet Saturday, Maypole pushed his little craft around the ten mile course for an average speed of 41.80 miles per hour. Maypole's time was 14:30.3. His fastest lap time was 42.57 miles per hour. Mrs. L. R. Sharp, Tulsa, Okla., was second and Lewis Carlisle third.

Everett Wins in Class F.

TILDEN EARNS COCHET MATCH; BEATS RICHARDS

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden, the veteran professional tennis player, today completed a clean sweep of an elimination series to determine an opponent for Henri Cochet of France for an indoor match next February by defeating Vincent Richards, who recently won the national pro championship. The scores were 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

In the opening matches of the series yesterday Tilden needed only 30 minutes to dispose of his old doubles partners, Frank Hunter and Bruce Barnes,

HUBBELL VOTED MOST VALUABLE IN WORLD SERIES

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Carl Hubbell, master of the screw ball and twice victor over the Washington Senators in two stirring engagements, emerged as the "most valuable player" in the world series triumph scored by the New York Giants, according to a consensus of sports writers polled today by the Associated Press.

Hubbell and Mel Ott, whose home run decided the fifth and final game in the tenth inning, ran away with the balloting. Tabulation of points on the basis of a "first five" picked by seventeen writers from the players of the two contending clubs showed Hubbell leading with 82 points and Ott next with 66.

Derbies Bring Carnegie Tech Eleven Luck

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Once upon a time Carnegie Tech had football teams that ranked with the nation's best. In those days former Coach Wally Steffen always wore a derby hat. He said the derby brought good luck.

Then came the "lean years." Students said it was because coaches no longer wore derbies. Came a new coach this year, Howard Harpster, former Carnegie back. The boys and girls took up a collection and presented him and his assistant, Don Lovejoy, with derbies before the Temple game yesterday.

M'Graw Lauds Terry Team as Game's Scrappiest.

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The New York Giants sat on top of the baseball world today for the first time since 1922 and from the way they performed in defiance of all prognostication and opposition, they will be there for some time.

When Bill Terry's miracle men won the pennant, the critics said they were not even the best team in the National league, outside of their pitching staff. When they took the field against the Senators, the odds were still against them. Within the short span of five days, however, the Giants routed the American league champions to prove that they are the best team in baseball today.

McGraw Lauds Terry.

Fittingly enough, the warmest and most striking tribute to Terry's leadership and the Giants' sensational success, came today from John Joseph McGraw, the gray haired chieftain who stepped out a year and a half ago after 30 years as manager, left the club when it was then in last place and then watched this year from the shadows of the sidelines, as it climbed back to the heights.

"It is full time to realize that Bill Terry has done one of the greatest jobs in baseball," McGraw said as he praised the first baseman he elected to succeed him in June, 1932. "Man for man, these Giants do not rank with some of the other great championship teams of baseball, but I haven't seen a team that pulled together any better, that showed more winning spirit on the field, or that had any more consistently resourceful pitching.

Pitching Is the Thing.

"These factors explain why the Giants rushed to the top of the league and whipped the Senators. In a short series pitching is fully 75 per cent of the issue and the marvelous work of Carl Hubbell, aided by Hal Schumacher and the veteran Adolfo Luque, turned the scales in favor of the Giants.

"Yet it was the greatest kind of a team victory. Every man on the Giants measured up to his job.

"Finally, the Senators realized they were up against greater pitching than they had faced all year, whereas their own staff, especially Al Crowder, was not up to expectations. In Hubbell, the American leaguers were up against one of the greatest pitchers of all time and I cannot praise too highly his resources and his courage."

Although Hubbell and Mel Ott, the 24 year old home run hero, emerged as the outstanding figures of the triumph, there was distinction and reward enough for all of the regulars, each of whom will collect $4,500 as his share of the series spoils.

The Senators, along with their regrets and second guesses will collect about $3,400 apiece. They may figure that the Giants, the fates, and even the umpires were against them, especially in the critical fourth game when Heinie Manush was ejected for a dispute with Umpire Charley Moran.

Hubbell Is Unbeatable.

The Washington pitchers couldn't stop Ott. The Senator sluggers could not penetrate the defense of Hubbell, who did not allow a single earned run in the 20 innings he worked. Youthful Joe Cronin, a freshman manager, did not have the experienced judgment or the good fortune to be able to match wits successfully with the Giants' famous huddle system, featuring Manager Bill Terry and Spokesman Blondy Ryan.

Once they were on top, the Giants never relaxed the pressure. Instinctively or by agreement reached in the huddle, they did the right thing at the right time, as witness the strategy by which Ryan and Critz moved back to a deep position and handled the double play ball hit by Pinch Hitter Cliff Bolton with the bases full in the 11th inning of the fourth game. Second guessers figured this was the turning point of the series, where a bunt by the Washington batsman might have changed the whole course of the series.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox now have another municipal baseball title to add to their extensive collection. They acquired the 1933 honors yesterday when, with one victory needed to conclude the fall series with the Cubs, they carried off their fourth straight game, 5 to 1. It was the thirteenth series won by the American leaguers in twenty meetings, the first of which ended in a tie in 1903, and one of which was the world series of 1906.

JIMMY DYKES.

As was the case in the three previous battles, the final found the late pennant contending Cubs without the spirit, or skill, to go places. They were almost totally eclipsed in their attack by Joe Heving, who hung on until the last inning before permitting the Cubs to dodge the added embarrassment of three consecutive shutouts. And while Heving was enjoying himself, probably to make amends for the time a Cub runner stole home to beat him out of a ball game while he was a Giant employé, two north side pitchers were showered with grief. One was gallant Guy Bush. The other was Pat Malone.

Ex-Macks Rout Bush.

The limited engagement played by Bush can be attributed to the work of the three former Athletics, whom he handled efficiently when they were world series principals in 1929. The trio—Mule Haas, Jimmy Dykes, and Al Simmons, rocked him with successive hits in the first inning, and the Mississippian vanished. Then Malone stepped in and was good enough to keep the American leaguers hitless until the seventh. The Sox treated Malone to such a dizzy going-over in the last two innings that three runs resulted from seven hits. Incidentally, one of these was a double by Heving, which drove in two mates.

The pleasure of being the hitting scamp of the four game event fell to Dykes, who like Sam Jones and Red Faber, probably wanted to show that it was exclusively an old man's competition. The old time Mack third baseman came up with a pair of hits, a pass and one out yesterday. In the three previous games he recorded seven hits in 13 attempts, making his series average .563.

Haas Starts Attack.

Malone created an embarrassing sit-

BY FRENCH LANE.

Horses whose lung power is mighty, whose hearts are large, and whose gameness alone, if nothing else, would keep them going, will have their inning during the final days of the Washington Park racing season this week.

Their test comes in the Washington Park cup to be run on Saturday. The cup is at two miles and a half, the longest race to be decided on the flat in Chicago in many seasons. Leading up to it earlier in the week will be contests at a mile and a half and at two miles.

After Yonkel's brilliant victory in the Harvey handicap at a mile and an eighth on Saturday, A. A. Baroni, the Reno, Nev., horseman, appeared to be holding a strong hand for the cup. Watch Tower, although of the plater type, is another noted route runner in Baroni's barn. Just the other day he proved his gameness by winning at a mile and a half.

Old Scimitar May Try It.

Sidney Grant, At Top, Late Date, and Cee Tee are others being pointed for the race, although it is possible the winner may not come from the ranks of the overnight handicap performers. There are numerous platers in the middle west that have been able to hold their own with stake horses at distances of a mile and a half or more.

Scimitar, now 9 years old, is one that may try for the cup. Black Fool, most consistent in his recent starts, is another, and Babee and Port o' Play are still other possibilities. The Choctaw may move in from Kansas City to seek the prize, while from Detroit may come two or three starters.

The fact that the horsemen have taken such a keen interest in the race is an indication that it will not be at all hard to revive distance racing here. It has been pushed into the background everywhere in America because speed rather than endurance has been demanded of our greatest horses.

Handicap for Juveniles.

The cup will carry an added money prize of $2,500. Also on the closing program will be the $2,500 Lakeside handicap for 2 year olds. All the best juveniles left in this section will go to the post in it, and the leading contenders six days before the running appear to be Signalman, Trey, Mr. James, Dan Sabath, Speedy Skippy, Don Manuel, Swiftsport, Bittybit, Judge Leer, Risky Miss, and Flickamaru.

These are the final stake races to be run in Chicago this year, and the day's sport will mark the end of the major racing season in Chicago. There will be 14 days of racing at Sportsman's Park, the half mile track in Cicero, following the end of the Washington Park season.

Many of the horses at Washington Park, particularly those owned by Chicagoans, will participate in the racing at the half mile track. Numerous overnight handicaps are to be run there, but no stake races are included on the program.

Aurora Expected to Abandon Its Fall Race Meet

The gates at the Aurora track probably will remain closed during the fall season. With the date for the opening now less than a week away, Joseph Cattarnich has announced no plans for racing there this fall. He has indicated he wants to make many improvements at the Fox River Valley plant before staging another meeting there.

The officials of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association are to meet early this week at which time plans will be made for the rebuilding of the 18 stables destroyed by fire there a month ago. A successor to the late John C. Shank, former president of the association, may be elected but this probably will go over until the annual meeting next spring.

Jockey C. E. Allen who visited the World's Fair a couple of weeks ago and didn't return in condition to fill his riding engagements the following afternoon, for which negligence he was suspended for 10 days, will be back in the saddle on several horses today.

The horses which race for Mrs. John Hertz may be wintered in North or South Carolina. A decision will be made and a training site selected by Frank Hackett, trainer of the Hertz horses, within a few days.

ARRANGE SERIES OF BASKETBALL GAMES AT FAIR

Four of the outstanding quintets in the United States will play in Chicago in basketball's contribution to A Century of Progress. Arrangements for a series of games, which will be played at the 132 armory, Madison and Rockwell streets, Oct. 23 and 25, were completed yesterday.

Two of the squads will come from Oklahoma, the Durant Cardinals, national A. A. U. girls' champions, and the Diamond Oilers of Tulsa, who won the national A. A. U. men's championship by defeating the Rosenberg-Arveys of Chicago last spring at Kansas City.

The Cardinals, unbeaten for two years, who wound up their season by defeating the Edmonton Grads, rated as the fastest girls' squad in the world, will meet the Spencer Coals of Chicago, Central A. A. U. champions. The Oilers will play a picked team of former Big Ten conference stars.

Dutch Lonborg, Northwestern university coach, will select the squad to face the Oilers. The players will start practice under the direction of Lonborg a week before the contests. Leading Western conference players of the last few seasons, including Joe Reiff, Northwestern, and Johnny Wooden, Purdue, are expected to be named on the team.

Mount Carmel Victor Over St. Rita, 6-0

Mount Carmel High school served notice yesterday that it is after its third consecutive championship of the Chicago Catholic High School Football league by defeating St. Rita, 6 to 0, in its opening game at Soldiers' field. Proceeds of the contest will be donated to the St. Bernard's hospital fund.

A twenty yard pass in the second quarter paved the way for Mount Carmel's winning touchdown. John Fogel, veteran full back, threw the ball to Dick Post, who was stopped on the St. Rita 10 yard line. Then Quarter Back Rogers, on the third down, raced around end to cross the goal line.

St. Rita threatened in the last period, marching to Mount Carmel's 1 yard line, but the champions held and punted out of danger. Two long passes and the plunging of Ralph Jackowski, St. Rita's star full back, had put the ball on Mount Carmel's goal line in the final minutes of the game.

St. Mel, De Paul, and Leo were victors in other league games, all by 6 to 0 scores. St. Mel triumphed over St. Patrick at St. Philip field; Leo won from De La Salle at Shewbridge field, and De Paul defeated St. George at Evanston.

St. Ignatius and De La Salle of Joliet played a scoreless tie in a non-league contest at Joliet. Lineups:

uation in the third by becoming charitable, but saved himself by refusing to let the Sox indulge in any free hitting. Pat walked Dykes with one out and gave a similar present to Simmons. Appling boosted a fly to Cuyler, and it was deep enough to permit Dykes to tear for third after the catch. The Sox decided they'd try out Hartnett's arm on a double steal, and Billy Herman whipped the ball back to the plate so speedily that Dykes was out with room to spare.

During these same three innings the Cubs were almost completely under the dominance of Heving. Only three men faced him in the first. He punctured Hendrick with a pitched ball in the second, but two were out and Hartnett bounced into a force play. After two were gone in the third English popped to deep short and it eluded Appling for a hit. Another force play stopped this. These were the only two men the Cubs put on base in the first three innings.

Cubs Waste Pair of Hits.

The Cubs threatened to get somewhere in the fourth, but were suppressed too quickly for their own comfort. After Cuyler had been thrown out by Heving, Babe Herman lined a single to right. Stephenson singled to center for the third Cub hit. This put scoring matters squarely up to Hendrick, who was understudying for Manager Grimm, and Hartnett. Hendrick's effort was a roller on which he was thrown out by Hayes, but he did advance the two runners to third and second. The fly ball that Hartnett hoisted to Swanson was of no value.

The next Cub to get to base was Cuyler, who singled to center with one out in the sixth. A fly ball and force play followed. Hendrick opened the seventh with a single past second base. He never got beyond first base. Hartnett flied deep to Simmons, Koenig, who batted for Jurges, fanned, and Malone fouled to Berry. Probably because he felt there was need for improvement after allowing a couple of hits, Heving whiffed English and Cuyler in the eighth.

Catch Up to Malone.

The end of Malone's string of hitless innings appeared when Swanson singled to right after two were out in the seventh. The speedster promptly pulled a delayed steal of second on Hartnett and this proved costly for Malone. Haas singled past Koenig at short to send Swanson home. Dykes poked a single to right, putting Haas on third. The inning ended when Simmons was called out on a close play on his slow bounder to English.

Stephenson doubled with one out in the ninth, went to third unnoticed and scored the Cubs' lone run on Hendrick's infield out.

Cubs and Sox Waste Little Time Leaving

A number of the Sox and Cubs were all packed yesterday before the game and skipped out last night for their respective winter retreats. Manager Charley Grimm of the Cubs will remain here a few days for club conferences and Lew Fonseca, the Sox boss, will have similar sessions with Owner Lou Comiskey. Fonseca plans to fly to his home in San Francisco.

Simmons saved Billy Herman from a possible error in the fifth. The Duke rolled to the second but conceded the out by not running. Herman kicked the ball all over the infield and after finally capturing it, made the throw to Hendrick.

The only Cub fielding blunders of the series were by Bill Jurges. He fumbled to start the second inning of the first game and the Sox rushed through the opening with three runs, which were enough to win. Jurges also fumbled in the third game played on Friday.

When Stephenson, after doubling in the ninth, went to third without drawing a throw, he was the fifth Cub to get that far in 32 consecutive innings of play. Stephenson also had the honor of carrying home two of the three runs scored by the Cubs in four days of play.

The Cubs' hitting was off color in all four of the games. They collected six off Jones in the opener, five off Faber the next day, seven off Lyons in the third game, and seven off Heving yesterday.

STEEL WINS 3 CASTING EVENTS; 3D IN ANOTHER

BERWYN BEATS AUSTIN.

Red Peterson intercepted an Austin Panther pass and raced 40 yards to a touchdown, to give the Berwyn Legion Parrots a 7 to 0 victory in the last two minutes of play, at Berwyn yesterday.

BROWNELLS ADD TO LEAD; TAKE THREE GAMES

Moulding-Brownell increased its lead in the Classic bowling league last night by winning three games from the second place Lorenz Knitting Mills.

The Budweiser team had high series with 3,177 with the A. J. Cermaks just one pin behind. The Budweiser's 1,117 game also was high.

Team Without a Home Wins After 23 Losses in Row

New York, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Cooper Union, the football team without a home, finally has ended a losing streak which began in 1929.

Forced to play all its games on foreign fields because it boasts no home gridiron, its opportunity for practice restricted for the same reason, Cooper Union had lost twenty-three consecutive games before it finally nosed out the New York Aggies at Farmingdale Saturday.

It was Cooper Union's second record breaking achievement of the season. Two weeks ago the New York city school scored a touchdown against Connecticut State, the first points it had scored in eight successive games, covering all of the 1932 season and the final game in 1931.

Cooper Union defeated Wagner, another New York district school, 13 to 7, in the next to last game of its 1929 season. Then it lost its final game that year, eight straight in 1930, six stright in 1931, seven straight in 1932, and its opening game this season. During that long stretch, Cooper Union scored only 62 points against 536 for the opposition.

SPARTA TAKES LEAD; DEFEATS WONDERBOLTS, 3-1

Sparta's soccer team defeated the Wieboldt Wonderbolts, 3 to 1, at Sparta stadium yesterday. The victory put Sparta in first place in the National Professional Soccer league. In a preliminary game the Ravenswood Scots won from the Hungarian-Americans, 3 to 0.

Sparta scored early in the first half when Clem Cuthbert shot the ball into the net after receiving a pass from Dave Coutts. The Wonderbolts tied the score a few minutes later. The half ended with Sparta holding a 2 to 1 advantage, Vicek scoring on a penalty kick.

Then the game resolved into a kicking duel. Rose downed a Packer punt which floated on the Portsmouth 2 yard line. Portsmouth, hurried by a rejuvenated Packer line, barely got the ball out to its 15 yard strip. Twice the Packer backs hammered through the Spartan tackles and slid on their bellies towards the goal. An offside then made it a first down for Green Bay only 2 yards from a score. On the third down Hank Bruder crossed the goal standing up. Roger Grove added the seventh point by placement.

Portsmouth elected to kick off to open the second half. Hinkle received the ball and galloped through all the Spartans except the safety man who dropped him on the Spartans' 35 yard line. Three plays advanced the ball to Portsmouth's 32 yard line, and then Grove, standing on the 40 yard strip, booted the ball between the uprights for three points.

Packers Go on Defensive.

With this lead Green Bay was well satisfied to go on the defensive. Exchange of kicks favored Green Bay and when Rose recovered a fumbled punt, Portsmouth was backed up to its goal line. In a vain effort to score in the last two minutes, the Spartans tried to pass, but Buckets Goldenberg intercepted it and raced to the Spartans' 17 yard line. In four consecutive smashes through the line Goldenberg reached the goal.

AURORA WHIPS GREENTREE FOR 2D TITLE, 12-9

Westbury, N. Y., Oct. 8.—(AP)—With the big Californian, Elmer Boeseke Jr., again in a leading rôle, the Aurora four today clinched its claim to high goal polo honors of the year as it added the Monty Waterbury Memorial cup to the open trophy it won a week ago yesterday.

Aurora took the Waterbury cup by beating Greentree, its opponent also in the open final, 12 to 9. Aurora won in the open final, 14-11, and its victory today was even more decisive, as it gave Greentree one goal by handicap.

Boeseke, playing at back for Aurora, scored six goals and stood out in a tightly knit defense which kept the nine goal Texas cowboy, Cecil Smith, well bottled up. The game was evenly contested through the sixth chukker, which ended with the score tied at 8 all, but Aurora smashed through for four goals in the last two periods while holding Greentree to one.

The lineup:

Seymour Knox	No. 1	J. H. Whitney
J. P. Mills	No. 2	Cecil Smith
E. T. Gerry	No. 3	Gerald Balding
Elmer Boeseke Jr.	Back	Ivor Balding

Score by periods:

Aurora	202	211	22—12
Greentree	120	122	01— 9

GUNNERS BEAT SHAMROCK, 7-6, AT ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Dick Frahm's sprint after touchdown gave the St. Louis Gunners, professional football team, a 7 to 6 victory over the Chicago Shamrocks today.

Frahm, right half of the St. Louis team, place kicked for the decisive point in the first quarter after he had carried the ball over for a touchdown.

Plays that made Football History

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 8.—One hundred and seventeen thousand saw the disputed play in the third period of the 1927 football game, between Southern California and Notre Dame, which the Irish won, 7 to 6, and only the players and officials knew what the argument was all about. And to this day the Trojans believe they won, but like a called strike in baseball the decision, a matter of opinion, withstood all protests.

The question involved was whether Southern California had scored two points on a safety or whether the play was a touchback.

Notre Dame led at the end of the half, 7 to 6. Southern California counted early in the first period on a forward pass from Capt. Drury to Saunders. Drury missed the place kick for the extra point. Then Notre Dame, in the same quarter, rushed the ball to the Trojans' 28 yard line. Riley forward passed to Bucky Dahman for the touchdown and Dahman's kick was successful.

Drops Ball in End Zone as He Is Tackled.

This was the setting when the teams resumed their battle in the third quarter, Southern California, a great offensive team with Drury leading the way, came down the field to penetrate deep into Notre Dame territory. The Irish line held, however, and then Southern California turned to passes.

Riley intercepted a Trojan pass in his end zone and a second later he was tackled. The ball bounded out of his hands. Southern California claimed that the interception by Riley and the tackle in the end zone produced a safety. This would have given the Trojans an 8 to 7 lead. Notre Dame claimed that Riley did not have control and possession of the ball when tackled and that it was an incomplete pass over the goal line. This would be a touchback and would give the ball to Notre Dame on its 20 yard line.

Rule Requires Player Have Possession and Control.

The rule governing forward passes, whether by the passing team or opponents, requires that the player catching it have "possession and control." Perhaps Riley had posession when he caught the ball, but did he have control of it? Southern California maintained that Riley had control and that he fumbled when tackled. Notre Dame said Riley did not have control when tackled.

The argument still persists. Perhaps other decisions have been as important. There are many in every game, but certainly no one decision can be found which was the subject of such prolonged controversy, occurring as it did before one of football's largest crowds and deciding the winner of an intersectional game.

Kansas Upsets Theory, Dope and Notre Dame With Tie

Last week the corn belt went wild when Iowa's football stock skyrocketed in a movement which caught the bears entirely unprepared. The conference had been selling Iowa short for four years. Now the enthusiasm in Iowa has spread to the plains of Kansas, for Saturday the Jayhawkers played a scoreless tie with Notre Dame.

The Kansans outplayed Notre Dame, reaching the 8 yard line in the second quarter and halting in the third period on Notre Dame's 10 yard line, while the Irish only on one occasion advanced to the Jayhawk 15 yard line, under their own power.

Only Eleven Can Play.

Kansas, with two previous games, was better conditioned. Certainly the team was more fully aroused. Notre Dame, because of its national reputation, always is on the spot. The season now is a success in Kansas regardless of the outcome of the Big Six conference race.

Kansas delivered a slap at the theory that Notre Dame's strength rests on an army of players. Critics have forgotten that only eleven men can play at one time and Kansas with one line substitution and backfield replacement equaled the entire Irish squad. Two of Kansas' backs played 60 minutes.

The game again emphasized the importance of the line. Notre Dame's greatest weakness Saturday was the impotence of the forwards, who generally were outcharged and who failed to open up holes. Notre Dame's Lukats, Pilney, and Elser will not gain yards until the boys up front outdrive and overpower their opponents.

Gophers Are Tied.

Both teams relied on fundamental attacks. Neither were tricked with the exception of an 11 yard gain by Kansas on a fake kick. More surprising (and this lays Notre Dame's quarter backs open to the charge of poor judgment) Kansas played a seven man line on defense at all times. Against this maximum of defense for running plays Notre Dame could not gain consistently. Nevertheless the four Kansas backs, deployed in a short diamond defense, covered all pass receivers.

Minnesota supported its reputation as a November team Saturday when it outgained Indiana, but finished with a 6 to 6 tie. Indiana scored when Fitzhugh Lyons, Negro end, received a Minnesota fumble before it touched the ground and raced 57 yards to the goal. If the ball had touched the ground, Lyons would have gained possession, but he could not have advanced the ball. Minnesota power did not get results.

Purdue is an almost unanimous choice to win the conference title, or at least share it, but the Boilermaker line was a disappointment in the 13 to 6 victory Saturday over Ohio university. Keegan, a second team full back, and Jim Carter, regular half back, made long runs for touchdowns. Purdue faces Minnesota's husky line Saturday against which a year ago the Boilermakers were able to score only once.

Wisconsin opened with a victory over Marquette, 19 to 0, while Illinois, preparing for its first Big Ten game with Wisconsin, trounced Washington university at St. Louis, 21 to 6. The Illini and Badgers apparently are of equal strength, which promises a closely fought battle Saturday at Champaign.

Ohio State Is Strong.

Michigan outpunted Michigan State in a rainy day game at Ann Arbor, winning 20 to 6. Michigan's kicks and return of State's kicks placed the ball in enemy territory. Whether Fay and Renner ever are equals of Harry Newman as field general and forward passer, or not, Michigan will always be difficult to beat because of the superior kicking and excellent fundamental blocking and charging. Michigan meets Cornell university Saturday and then open the conference season against Ohio State.

The Buckeyes ran over Virginia Saturday. The Southerners were outweighed and outclassed. Vanderbilt this week will be a better test for Ohio, but the Bucks should win. Indeed, Ohio State looms as a title possibility, the result resting largely on the Michigan game.

Chicago defeated Cornell college Saturday, 32 to 0. The Maroons have a good first eleven which has spirit and speed and shows the result of hours of drills on fundamentals. Chicago plays at Washington university Saturday and then will shoot the works against Purdue the following week.

15,000 See Iowa.

Nebraska's 26 to 0 victory over Texas labels the Cornhuskers as worthy of defense of their Big Six championship. Iowa romped over Bradley Tech, 38 to 0, and now will rest for two weeks waiting to meet Wisconsin. Fifteen thousand saw the Iowa game evincing the box office value of the victory over Northwestern. Last year only 1,200 saw the Hawks lose to Purdue.

Stanford edged out Santa Clara, 7 to 0, Saturday, and now will play Northwestern. California's rally to beat St. Mary's, 14 to 13, featured the coast games. Southern California, with three regulars missing from its national championship eleven, whipped Washington State, 33 to 0, and served notice of its intention to hold the Pacific Coast conference title as well as its national honors.

Ed Linke, who joins the Washington Senators in the spring, allowed the Logan Squares only three hits yesterday to win the first game of a double header, 1 to 0, for the Cragen Merchants. Linke's double drove in Art Olson with the only run of the game.

The second game was won by the Squares, 2 to 1, when Lindstrom tripled, Witry singled, Moss sacrificed, and McDuff singled, to score the tieing and winning runs in the sixth. Score:

STANFORD NEXT FOR WILDCATS; DUE WEDNESDAY

N. U. to Make New Start After 2 Weeks' Rest.

Northwestern's football team will resume play Saturday, after two weeks' rest, in its intersectional game with the undefeated Stanford eleven at Soldiers' field.

Stanford, playing its first season under Coach Tiny Thornhill, who succeeded Pop Warner, has already assumed a leading position among Pacific coast teams. Victories over San Jose, U. C. L. A., and Santa Clara places Stanford among the coast's outstanding teams.

Northwestern has no such record, having lost, 7 to 0, to Iowa in the season's opener. Despite this unimpressive start, the Wildcats expect to show a reversal of form Saturday. During the past week Coach Dick Hanley has been experimenting with a revamped lineup which is expected to add much offensive power.

The Wildcats will have their full strength for Saturday's game. Al Kawal, regular guard, and Chuck Duvall, sophomore full back, both of whom were out of the Iowa game with injuries, will be ready to play.

STANFORD STARTS EAST.

PANAMA TO FILE 'UNFAIR' CHARGE WITH ROOSEVELT

President Arias in U.S. on Canal Trade Competition.

BY GERALD MARTIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, Oct. 8.—Panamanians are awaiting anxiously the outcome of the trip of their president, Harmodio Arias, to Washington, D. C., to see President Roosevelt.

Arias, who arrived in New York tonight, proposes to lay before the President several matters of business upon which, according to leading authorities here, the economic existence of this little Central American republic depends. The most important of these matters concerns the Panamanian charge that its "big brother" to the north is using certain Canal Zone privileges to compete unfairly with Panamanian business enterprizes.

Beer Case in Point.

For instance, the Canal zone, which is a strip about 10 miles wide across Panama's middle for which the United States pays $250,000 annually as rent, pays no duties on goods imported from the United States. Panama, of course, does.

This has given rise to the main grievance which President Arias will voice to President Roosevelt. For, with the legalization of the sale of beer in the United States, Canal zone commissaries and army and navy post exchanges launched a string of beer gardens which sold beer—imported free from the United States—at about half the price for which it could be sold by the merchants of Panama.

Since the government of Panama receives the greater part of its revenues from breweries, saloon licenses and taxes on beer and liquor, it is naturally rather concerned, though it does admit that even so the bulk of the heavy Canal zone pay rolls finds its way into the registers of Panamanian merchants in the capital and Colon.

Cite Sale of Luxuries.

A similar situation exists with other products than beer, Panamanians maintain. They point to the sale of such luxuries as Doulton china and silk as well as the sale of beer, as a violation of the original treaty of 1903 with the United States in which it was agreed that only actual necessities for American employés would be imported and sold by the Canal zone.

Another subject for discussion with Roosevelt is related to this alleged unfair competition. It concerns the properties in Colon which now are managed by the United States owned Panama railroad. They include employés' homes, clubhouses, two schools and a hotel.

It is held by the assemblymen that management of this property tends to subtract still more trade from Panama.

T. R. Enters Debate.

As a clincher for Panama's complaint against Canal Zone competition, President Arias is likely to show President Roosevelt a statement which President Theodore Roosevelt made on Oct. 18, 1904. It said:

"We [the United States] have not the slightest intention of establishing an independent colony in the middle of the state of Panama, or of exercising any greater governmental functions than are necessary to construct, maintain and operate the canal under the right given us by this treaty. Least of all do we desire to interfere with the interest and prosperity of the people of Panama."

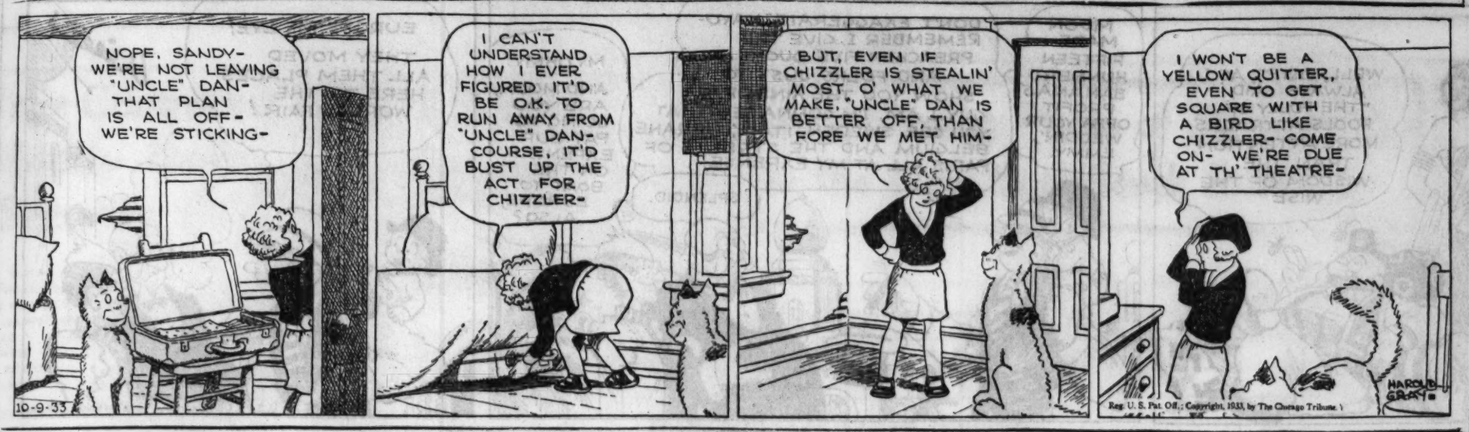
LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Her Responsibility



HAROLD TEEN—IT'S A NEW CODE

DEMOCRATS ARE SPLIT BY INDIANA CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Paul V. McNutt, elected governor of Indiana last November after an active campaign headed by R. Earl Peters, chairman of the Indiana Democratic party, will offer a compromise in the fight between McNutt and Peters for control of the party's war chest when the state committee holds a special meeting here tomorrow.

Originally political allies, McNutt and Peters have drifted apart in distributing party patronage and also as the election draws nearer of a United States senator from Indiana in 1934. McNutt followers have organized a group known as the Hoosier Democratic club, which has levied 2 per cent monthly on salaries of all state office holders. This will amount to $120,000 in one year, says Peters. And he has demanded that the money be turned over to the treasurer of the state committee.

McNutt at first resisted Peters' demand although the party chairman pointed out that only the official party organization can legally gather money to be used for party purposes in elections and election campaigns. At McNutt's suggestion, Peters called the special meeting for Monday.

McNutt will propose that the Hoosier Democratic club money be turned over to a special subcommittee of the state committee.

A poll taken by an Indianapolis newspaper revealed that few state employés actually are handing over their 2 per cent voluntarily. State salaries have been trimmed, these workers assert.

OLIVER J. WRIGHT DIES DAY BEFORE 85TH BIRTHDAY

Oliver James Wright, 2704 East 77th street, a veteran real estate dealer, died yesterday at his home. He would have celebrated his 85th birthday today, also the anniversary of the great Chicago fire of 1871, which he viewed from a farm at Naperville.

Mr. Wright had vivid memories of the fire and of some of the men of that period who later became famous. He moved from Naperville to the Lawndale district in 1885, and one of his neighbors was John G. Shedd. He also knew E. H. Gary, then a young practicing attorney not yet interested in steel.

The octogenarian was active until he became ill recently. He used to say: "I like to be where there is action and see what is going on." As late as a year ago he still "dabbled" in real estate, which he was certain would recover its former high values.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Olive Ford, with whom he lived, Mrs. A. C. Unger of Naperville, and a son, Oliver King Wright of Kansas City, Mo. Funeral services will be held from an undertaking chapel at 2700 East 75th street tomorrow afternoon and burial will be at Naperville.

RUSSIA ASSAILS DEAD GENERAL OF CZARIST DAYS

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Newspapers here commented bitterly today on the death of the former czarist general, Nicholas Yudenitch, at Nice last week. Pravda said:

"A dog's death was the death of the entente lackey whose white bands were driven away from Petrograd."

The paper recalled the general's two attempts to capture Petrograd during the civil war, pointing out that only heroic defense by the ragged Red army saved the city.

"His death can only raise a feeling of contempt," the newspaper Socialist Agriculture said.

Wife of Luther W. Conover Is Dead; Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen Stribling Conover, wife of Luther W. Mrs. Conover was born in Cass county, Illinois, and had lived in Chicago for more than 45 years. In recent years the Conovers have been living in the Drake hotel. In addition to her husband Mrs. Conover is survived by two sons and a daughter: L. Harold of El Paso, Tex.; George S. of the Drake hotel, and Mrs. Helen Conover Morris, wife of Edward Morris.

*Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th] is president pro tem of the council and member, ex-officio, of all the standing committees.

Illness Affects Doyle's Record.

Illness accounted for the absence of Ald. Doyle from three of the six meetings that he missed. He was the only alderman who made known to the city clerk the reason for his absences. The finance committee held the most sessions, 14 in all during the period. Next were the committees on local transportation and on streets and alleys, which held seven sessions each. Five committees held no sessions during the six months' period. They were the committees on consolidation, reorganization, and taxation; railway terminals, special assessments, schools, fire, and civil service, and rules.

VAST U. S. PLAN TO RAISE PRICES IS TAKING FORM

Farmers Informed on Main Factors.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

While the administration apparently has done little to assist the farmer, judging from the recent action of the grain markets, official statements given out by the AAA during the last week indicate that the vast program, which is expected to ultimately bring about a higher level of prices, is slowly taking form, and the effects may start to be felt before long.

For frankness and clear grasp of the agricultural situation the bulletins given out by the AAA lately are unique. Practically every factor likely to influence the markets is outlined, regardless of whether it is favorable for higher or lower prices, apparently in an effort to "sell" the main idea—that of the long-time effect on the market—to the farmer, the public and the grain trade.

Admit Prices May Drop.

The official statement covering the AAA plan as to the corn and hog problem, and in substance the same idea would appear to apply to wheat or other basic commodities covered by the adjustment agricultural act, admits that there is a possibility of a decline in the market until the necessary adjustment in supply and demand has made headway.

Overproduction of hogs, in part due to the drastic falling off in the export demand for hog products, has caused a radical shift in the percentage of corn consumed by the country in recent years, according to the report. Whereas during the 1910-'14 period nine out of every 50 bushels of corn raised, were fed to horses and mules, 8 bushels to cattle and 18 bushels to hogs, during the 1924-'29 period horses and mules consumed only 7 bushels, cattle 19 bushels and hogs 24 bushels.

Pig Killing Only One Step.

With a lessened demand for hog products abroad, the price of hogs has been materially affected, as has that of corn. The slaughter of the 6,000,000 or more pigs by the government is asserted to be only the first step necessary to bring about readjustment to a much higher level. Exports of pork and lard in 1932 were the smallest in 50 years, it is stated.

Based on the experience of former years it is claimed a difference of 10 per cent in the number of hogs usually results in a change of 20 per cent in the price. This idea accounts for the recent pig slaughtering campaign, which roughly resulted in killing 10 per cent of the number of pigs available. The prices of hogs and corn are closely related, it is said, and consequently measures that raise hog income indirectly increase the farmers' income from corn.

Wheat Resists Pressure.

Wheat, like corn, has been caught in the maze of the government's theories as to how to advance prices, but unlike corn, wheat showed considerable resistance to selling pressure during the last week. Net losses for the week were 3½ to 3⅝ cents, with December closing Saturday at 86¼ to 86½ cents, May at 90⅜ to 90⅝ cents and July at 89¼ cents.

Practically all of the inflation upturn in wheat has been lost lately and in view of this the trade is again giving the supply and demand situation attention.

The effect of the processing tax on wheat, as far as domestic consumption is concerned, cannot be definitely determined at the present time, it is said. It is regarded as too early in the season for the heavy reduction in the acreage for the 1934 crop to be a market factor. Between the government's efforts to advance prices and the lack of speculative trading, which tends to restrict upturns, the trade is inclined to look for continued erratic fluctuations. The range of prices last week follows:

	December.		May.		July.
Monday	89¼	90⅝	93⅜-	94⅝	92	93⅝
Tuesday	88⅝	89⅞	92⅞-	93⅞	91¼	92½
Wednesday	89⅝	91	93⅜-	95¼	92	93⅝
Thursday	89	90⅝	93⅛-	94⅞	91⅝	93½
Friday	84⅛	85⅞	88⅜-	89⅞	87	91⅜
Saturday	83⅛	87⅝	87⅛-	91⅜	80¾	85⅞
For week	83⅛	91	87¼-	95¼	80¾	93⅝
Fr. week	88⅛	93⅛	92⅞	97⅞	.....	.....
Last year	48½	54½	53⅝-	59⅛	55¼	60½
2 yrs. ago	44⅝	50⅛	48⅝-	54⅝	49	54⅝
Season	68⅝	1.24	87½	1.28⅛	80¾	91¾
1932	48⅛	66⅛	53⅜-	62⅛	55¼	67⅛

Seek Hog Corn Reduction.

The main idea advanced in the government's bulletin on corn and hogs is to call attention to the fact that if the supply of hogs and corn can be curtailed to such an extent that excess production is removed, the disparity which prevails in the purchasing power of the two commodities will vanish. The report also advocates processing taxes, where necessary, on other livestock or agricultural products to prevent a shift from less profitable production into corn or hogs.

For many weeks the prospect of the shortest corn crop in 32 years

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—Important changes in the federal securities act, as well as the Glass - Steagall banking bill, will be advocated at the next session of congress. Brokers and representatives of some financial institutions have contended that the security act must be simplified to remove alleged uncertainties which they claim have deterred nationally known underwriters and investment houses from offering new issues.

SENATOR CARTER GLASS.

Senator Glass is quoted as determined to offer an amendment to the bank bill to permit state-wide banking branches in all states by national banks. This, he thinks, is necessary in order to further strengthen the banking system, as many weak institutions have been closed since the recent bank holiday, and some smaller communities are without banking facilities. In his opinion such communities will get banks only through extension of the law which will permit of state-wide branches.

Roosevelt Opposition Likely.

It is apparent that both these acts passed in the last session will be subject to serious moves for revamping. On the other hand, President Roosevelt originally opposed state-wide branch banking and is reported to be opposed to any salient change in the securities act.

As the securities act now stands, many nationally known investment houses fear to incur, perhaps quite innocently, liability under the drastic penalties imposed, Simon Michelet, Washington lawyer who has studied the law, declared tonight. He has written a book on the act in which he points out some of the things the underwriters wish simplified.

According to Mr. Michelet, in the case of 228 of the registration statements filed up to Sept. 23, not one could be accepted without revision due to errors, some major, some minor.

New Issues Chiefly Trusts.

Of these 228 issues filed, 80 or more than a third, are those of investment trusts. The second largest class, embracing 49, included mining companies, with gold mines predominant. Industrials ranked third, with 42 registrations.

Notable for their absence, according to Mr. Michelet, were nationally known investment bankers and prominent underwriting houses. In this regard Mr. Michelet said:

"A letter written by one investment banking house expressed grave apprehension that potential civil liabilities imposed upon an underwriter by the act could exceed the amount at which the issue was offered to the public.

"When congress convenes in January, 1934, clarifying amendments to the federal securities law will be proposed for adoption to encourage private capital expenditures in the fields of business and industry through new securities issued to help finance the 'new deal.'

"Removing the uncertainties will reduce the hazards of large outlays of capital under this new law imposing broad potential liabilities."

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—(AP)—With the full force of its operation underway in Illinois for barely six weeks, the Home Owners' Loan corporation announced that 110 impending foreclosures on properties to a total value of $341,867 had been prevented as of Sept. 23.

Seventeen applications totaling $51,300 were rejected before appraisal and 13 totaling $76,500 were rejected after appraisal. Applications withdrawn numbered seven, amounting to $28,120.

The number of loans closed by bond exchange transaction, was 11, totaling $57,800.

CLOUDED VIEW KEEPS TRADERS OUT OF MARKET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 8.—Brokerage house comment indicates a wide divergence of opinion in Wall street over the stock market's immediate outlook.

One school of thought, mindful of present uncertainties on the score of inflation, the success of the NRA scheme of things, France's adherence to the gold standard and the like, can see nothing ahead but steadily declining prices until the future is clarified.

Another speculative group, banking on the indefinite continuation of present governmental policies and the sustaining power of the underlying forces of recovery, are hopeful if not exactly confident that the rallying tendencies which developed in last week's share trading will prove the forerunners of a resumption of the major advance so rudely interrupted during the latter part of July.

Some Expect Trading Range.

Still a third class of soothsayers think the market is now in trading range and that a prolonged period of narrow price movements with no definite trend is in store.

Faced with such a confusion of opinion among the professionals, the rank and file are sticking to the sidelines, evidently determined to sit tight and refrain from any further activity until something happens. This is making for a very dull market.

The so-called wave of inflationary psychology which was the motive force of the market for so long appears to have spent its force as a market factor for the time being.

Believe Inflation Put Aside.

Dominant belief in the street now is that the administration has definitely abandoned for the time being at least whatever currency inflation or dollar devaluation plans it may have had up its sleeve and that official attention will be concentrated more on the NRA program for the next few weeks than on monetary matters.

On the business side the week brought out little that was new.

On the whole the stock market has been a gainer—to the extent of some two points—on the week, in spite of some rather heavy selling waves which have swept over it. It has driven forward in three of the six trading sessions and on one day—Wednesday—staged its most spectacular rally in months, the averages shooting up more than four points.

Metal and repeal shares have claimed the major interest of the trading community.

Eastern Rails to Meet Rate Cuts in West

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 8.—A sweeping victory for the western railroads in a campaign for lower passenger fares will be concluded on Tuesday, when the eastern managements are scheduled to fall in line by cutting their tariffs to pre-war levels. Both sections are to put the new rates in effect for a six month experimental period beginning Dec. 1.

As a result of the action forced by the western lines, the eastern presidents' conference will adopt on Tuesday a tariff which will reduce the present basic fare of 3.6 cents a mile to 3 cents for one way tickets and 2.5 cents for return tickets.

End Pullman Surcharge.

The Pullman surcharge, which has been a source of considerable revenue and even greater protest since 1920, will be abolished. Mileage tickets at 2.7 cents for 3,000 miles also will be offered.

The prevailing pre-war rate was 3 cents a mile, with mileage tickets as low as 2 cents a mile for intrastate travel and 2.5 cents a mile for interstate travel.

South May Fall in Line.

A committee of southeastern presidents, headed by W. R. Cole, president of the Louisville and Nashville, will meet another headed by F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central, on Tuesday in an effort to make the new rates effective in the southeast on Dec. 1.

Such action will leave only New England with the old rates. The New Haven until now has declined to join the lower fare moves and the Boston and Maine, Maine Central, and Bangor and Aroostook have not disclosed their positions.

CHICAGO DEPARTMENT STORE RETAIL SALES HOLD AT HIGH LEVEL

Retail trade in the Chicago department stores held fairly steady at former levels last week, according to tfade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Although the dollar volume of purchases by Legionnaires and other visitors to the city was confined to novelties and the less expensive items, the stimulus enabled Chicago's retail sales to maintain their lead over those of other large cities.

Reports from some of the larger mail order houses also indicated consistent gains during recent weeks. One of the larger of these stores announced that September sales were the best for any month this year and more than 14 per cent ahead of the corresponding month last year. Drug sales as a whole increased sharply in September and one company stated that business was more than 16 per cent ahead of the like period last year. Announcement was also made that sales of radios by one of the local manufacturers were the largest for any month since 1931.

U. S. SUGAR PACT ON MARKETING TO BE SCRAPPED

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The proposed sugar stabilization agreement has been scrapped by the Roosevelt administration.

This was indicated definitely tonight in authoritative quarters following conferences between President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace.

It was said there was little or no prospect that the tentative pact, which would have assigned quotas to the various producing interests, would be revived.

Secretary Wallace, the President and other officials have been going over the proposed agreement for several days. Officials said alternative proposals and modifications were considered and abandoned.

The farm adjustment administration, however, plans to put through "immediately" marketing codes for the beet and domestic cane sugar areas, Secretary Wallace said. Plans for limitation of production probably will be written into these.

It became evident last week that Secretary Wallace was opposed to the basic sugar marketing pact in its present form and that he would recommend rejection to the President. There was evidence also that it did not meet with White House and state department approval.

Developments in Cuba probably have had much to do with the decision to put an end to the efforts to arrive at an agreement which would have limited the amount of sugar entering domestic commercial channels for the year beginning last July 1 to around 7,000,000 raw tons annually.

Sale of Power to Large Users Rises Sharply

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 7.—A tremendous pickup in the amount of electric power sold to large commercial consumers for August is shown in the monthly report for 100 per cent of the industry by the Edison Electric institute. The gain in total sales is also shown to have been large.

Sales to large consumers of light and power amounted to 3,400,587,000 kilowatt hours in August, as against 2,616,698,000 in the same month last year. This was a gain of 30 per cent. These sales, however, are made on a wholesale basis and are not transmitted into profits as quickly as sales made at retail.

Retail Sales Show Decline.

Domestic users of light and power bought 863,679,000 kilowatt hours in August, compared with 838,463,000 in the same month of 1932, a gain of 3 per cent. There was a decline of 0.2 per cent, or from 1,015,998,000 to 1,014,104,000 kilowatt hours, in the sales of small commercial users of power and light. These sales are also made at retail prices.

Large gains, however, were registered in the sales of electrified steam to railroads. This item accounted for 55,654,000 electric hours in August this year, against 41,782,000 last year, a jump of 33.2 per cent.

Total sales in the month, covering all classes of business, amounted to 5,871,851,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 5,045,163,000 in the corresponding month of 1932, a gain of 16.4 per cent.

Revenue Up 2.3 Per Cent.

Contrasting with this gain, however, the statement showed that the total revenue from ultimate consumers for the month was $143,441,770, compared with $140,255,500, or a gain of only 2.3 per cent. The industry has recently been complaining that, while heavy buyers of current at wholesale have been increasing their demands, residential and other small consumers who buy at retail and provide the bulk of the profit have been slow in increasing their demands.

A similar comparison is shown in the institute's figures for the twelve months ended Aug. 31. In this case it is shown that the total of kilowatt hours sold to ultimate consumers by the entire industry was 64,069,333,000, or 3.3 per cent, below the total of 66,175,799,000 electric hours reported in the preceding corresponding period. But the total revenue from ultimate consumers declined 5.6 per cent, or from $1,888,094,800 to $1,778,179,700.

Per Customer Use Higher.

Among the other interesting statistics given in the report the average annual consumption per customer has jumped in the twelve months ended Aug. 31 from 597 to 601 kilowatt hours, or 0.7 per cent, at the same time the average monthly bill per customer has declined from $2.80 to $2.77, or 1.1 per cent, and the average revenue per kilowatt hour has dropped from 5.62 to 5.54 cents.

These figures present a reflection of the extent to which public utility rates have been reduced by the various state commissions during the last year.

STEEL OUTPUT IS HELD STEADY BY OLD ORDERS

Week's Rate Is 38%; New Orders Low.

Pressure for deliveries against third quarter contracts, which the steel code requires to be effected by Oct. 15, sustained the national steel works rate at 38 per cent last week, according to the magazine Steel. The additional capacity which Pittsburgh steel mills put on, despite labor difficulties, offset the operating losses in the Buffalo, Wheeling, and New England districts.

That new business was negligible is no uncommon occurrence following the conclusion of the contracting period, the review notes. In a week or ten days mills will be dependent on strictly current consuming needs, minus withdrawals from stock.

Rail Prices Dim Prospects.

"Whatever enthusiasm has been kindled by the prospect of 844,525 tons of rails and 245,221 tons of track fastenings being placed, largely through government financing, is neutralized by the pressure of Railroad Coördinator Eastman on prices," claims the magazine. "A reduction to $35 a ton, specified as the minimum acceptable, is equivalent to 1.52 cents per pound for a product which is practically a specialty, compared with a present Pittsburgh market of 1.70 cents on tank plates and structural shapes, 1.75 cents on commercial carbon bars and hot rolled strip, and 1.95 cents on cold finished bars.

"This 1,089,746 tons of track material would entail the pouring of about 1,300,000 tons of ingots, and at the present rate of operation would increase production 8 points if concentrated over a period of three months."

Fuel Situation an Obstacle.

While labor disturbances and shutdowns in the Weirton and immediate Pittsburgh districts are having at present no major effect on production the fuel situation remains tense, according to the magazine.

For the first time in 53 years no Connellsville beehive coke was made in the week ended Sept. 30, and the deficiency in fuel has been supplied by West Virginia and Kentucky mines. New prices of coke are sure to be sharply higher, says Steel, and will affect iron and steel quotations.

There were numerous adjustments in prices in warehouse markets last week in accordance with the mill market. Mill prices and scrap were steady, however.

Structural awards last week, amounting to 12,859 tons, against 26,981 in the preceding week, were close to the year's weekly average. For navy requirements 2,500 tons were placed, and 4,000 tons were offered for bids. Twenty-five hundred tons of plates have been awarded for 17 barges.

WORLD COTTON CONSUMPTION IN AUGUST HIGHER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 8.—World consumption of all kinds of cotton during August totaled 2,179,000 bales, compared with 2,104,000 bales in July and 1,819,000 bales in August, last year, according to the New York Cotton Exchange service. Consumption in August was the largest for that month since 1927, when such records were first kept.

The consumption of American cotton in August, 1,226,000 bales, was the second largest August total in history. The consumption of 913,000 bales of foreign growths established a record for August. In all sections of the world spinning activity operated at a high rate, according to the exchange service.

The orient, together with the minor consuming countries, was the only division of the industry which used less cotton in August this year than in August last year. While the orient and the minor countries reduced their consumption from 692,000 to 675,000 bales, the United States increased from 404,000 to 589,000 bales, Great Britain from 138,000 to 209,000 bales, and the continent from 565,000 to 706,000 bales.

World Stocks Lower.

The world stock of cotton on Aug. 31 was below that of the previous year, although the world crop this year was larger than last. The total stocks on Aug. 31, including the estimated unharvested portions of American and foreign crops, was approximately 38,361,000 bales, compared with 39,230,000 bales on the same date last year.

Offerings of new crop cotton somewhat in excess of trade demand, with speculative interest limited, were responsible in part for the downward movement in cotton prices during the last week. The recession was a continuation of the general decline which began about three weeks ago. At the close of trading Saturday active contracts on the New York Cotton exchange were down 115 to 126 points from the high of Sept. 19. The net change for the week was 1 point on a 44 to 52 points.

Expect Record Crop.

The report that the foreign crop of cotton this season will be the largest on record attracted attention, but the effect to this was offset by indications that world consumption of cotton is running above normal and world stocks are being reduced. The Indian crop prospect was reduced by excessive rains in September, but indications still point to above an average yield. The Egyptian crop promises to be somewhat above average, compared with a short crop last year.

The cotton mills of the country are maintaining their activity well above the average and much above the level of a year ago, although considerably below the high rate reached in June and July. Prices of most lines of cotton goods showed a downward trend during the week, partly in consequence of the relatively light demand and partly due to the declining tendency in the price of the raw material.

PITTSBURGH SEES $10,000,000 IN NEW STEEL ORDERS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Steel industries, the backbone of Pittsburgh, are anticipating new orders of $10,000,000 for the district before the end of the month.

The orders, when they come, will be this section's share of approximately 1,300,000 tons of steel for new construction, rails, fastenings, and other heavy construction.

Virtually every capital steelmaking plant in the district will share in these results of the recovery program.

Hundreds of men will go back to work, many for the first time in four years, and hundreds who have been employed in the face of a declining steel backlog will be given assurance of months of additional labor.

Pay rolls directly due to the contemplated orders will swell more than a million dollars and bring additional millions for workers in other industries.

The largest order in prospect is 844,746 tons, one of the biggest single commitments of record, for steel rails for the nation's railroads. Carnegie Steel company is certain to share in this. The United States Steel corporation was one of the four rail industries asked by the government to submit bids on the pooled order.

U. S. AND CANADA TRADE GROUPS TO MEET TODAY

SEIGNIORY CLUB, Que., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Amelioration of social and economic relations between the United States and Canada is the object of committee meetings to be begun here tomorrow by members of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Representatives of each organization arrived here over the week-end and engaged in private talks concerning the topics to be discussed. William Butterworth, Moline, Ill., heads the United States group, while S. B. Gundy, Toronto, leads the Canadian delegation.

The discussions, said members of the delegations, will seek to discover means for the removal of barriers between Canada and the United States.

CANADA EXPORTS LESS WHEAT, BUT VALUE IS STEADY

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 8.—(AP)—The export of wheat during the first six months of the present fiscal year, April to September, totaled 87,616,587 bushels, valued at $60,279,040, the dominion bureau of statistics reported today.

Although in volume this was 16,081,435 bushels lower than the export of the corresponding six months of 1932 the value was only $638,550 less. The average export price was 68.7 cents, compared with 58.7 cents a year ago.

FOREIGN TRADE DROPS, BUT U. S. STAYS IN FRONT

Exports Exceed Imports by 288 Millions.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Financial emergencies throughout the world during 1932 sent the level of American foreign trade to a new low in that year, the commerce department reported today, but the United States maintained its position as the leading export nation.

At the end of twelve months which saw nearly all of our principal customer nations forced to erect trade barriers in an effort to reëstablish or protect a balance in their international payments, the United States still had a favorable merchandise trade margin of 288 million dollars, the department said.

Following the steady downard trend apparent since 1928, exports last year totaled one billion 611 million dollars, according to the commerce report, as compared with 2 billion, 424 million in 1931. This was a 33 per cent drop.

Imports Off 37 Per Cent.

Imports likewise dropped by 37 per cent, from 2,091 millions in 1931 to 1,323 millions in 1932, the department said, adding that "declines in prices were responsible for a considerable part of the fall in values."

"The outstanding development in international trade during 1932," according to Willard L. Thorp, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, "was the increasing subordination, as the year advanced, of commercial transactions to measures of control dictated by urgent monetary and financial considerations.

"Notable among these was the pressure upon government to maintain or regain something like a balance in their international payments in the face of declining exports and thus to protect their currencies from depreciation. By the end of the year all but seven of the countries of continental Europe and many nations elsewhere had adopted some form of foreign exchange control.

"In addition various other trade barriers had been raised by over half of the 65 commercially important countries. Tariff increases, intended primarily for revenue or import curtailment, were general and there was wide recourse to import quotas, especially in Europe. Inevitably these measures further restricted the international movement of goods and contributed in no small degree to the reduction in United States trade."

Indications More Cheerful.

Mr. Thorp found more cheering indications, however, in the trend of foreign trade during 1932 as compared with 1931. Similar expressions have come recently from the United States chamber of commerce.

"Merchandise exports exceeded imports of 288 million dollars in 1932," said Mr. Thorp, "46 millions less than in 1931. Although this export surplus was decidedly small as compared with that of 342 millions recorded in 1929 it represented a higher percentage of the total trade."

From only 93 millions for the first half of 1932," he explained, "the favorable merchandise trade balance rose to 195 millions for July-December, while in 1931 the tendency was in the opposite direction and it dropped from 209 millions for January-June to 125 millions for July-December."

"In addition to the 288 million dollar balance of merchandise trade, the report disclosed, the United States ended 1932 with a credit balance of 131 million dollars representing the net result of this country's visible and invisible transactions with foreign countries during the year.

Gold Movement Changes.

"This 1932 credit balance compared with a similar margin of 160 millions in 1231, but it did not include gold and currency shipments and capital movements during the year. Including gold and currency shipments but not capital transactions, the department said, the favorable credit balance at the end of 1932 amounted to 40 million dollars as compared with 326 millions in 1931."

"This marked difference," it was stated, "was accounted for by the large net exports of gold during 1931, resulting principally from the withdrawals by foreigners of their dollar balances after England's suspension of gold payments in September, 1931."

"Imports of silver," according to the report amounted to $19,650,000 and silver exports to $13,850,000."

Agricultural products continued during the year to increase in importance in our export trade, the report disclosed. In 1932, it was said, shipments of farm products abroad made up 42 per cent of our total exports, as compared with 35 per cent in 1931, and 32 per cent in 1930.

RAIL PENSION GROUP TO OPEN MEETING TODAY

In their annual discussion on means to further passage of a national railroad pension law, 150 delegates will open a three or four day convention of the Railroad Employes' National Pension association at the Congress hotel today.

At present the association, which has branches among employes of all railroads, is favoring the Hatfield-Keller bill pending in congress, providing for the retirement of every employé 65 years old or with 30 years service, with pension from a fund to be obtained two parts from the railroads and one part from salaries, according to W. W. Royster of Chicago, national president.

The delegates will be addressed during the convention by Representatives B. M. Jacobson of Iowa and Martin F. Smith of Washington, D. C., Senator Louis Murphy of Iowa, Lieut. Gov. Thomas O'Malley of Wisconsin and former Senator Otis F. Glenn of Illinois, Mr. Royster announced.

TIN PRICE RISES TO NEW HIGH IN LONDON MARKET

Consumption Exceeds Production.

New York, Oct. 8.—Tin resumed its upward trend to another new high for the year last week, influenced almost entirely by the action of London, where speculative buying was based on expectations that the international tin committee, meeting next week, would increase quotas.

Current consumption is above the rate of production. Domestic consumers, however, withheld purchases owing to decreasing mill activity as a result of labor troubles at some important tin plate mills and smaller demand from automobile manufacturers.

Other nonferrous metals were unchanged. The only feature to copper was broader foreign buying at steadier prices. This demand was linked with reports of the proposed formation of a new copper cartel abroad.

Electrolytic 9 Cents.

In the domestic market the basis remained nominally unchanged at 9 cents for electrolytic in the Connecticut valley with producers and smelters holding steady at that level. It was indicated, however, that some small resale business had been put through at slight concessions. Deliveries to fabricators against old contracts was said to continue fairly active.

Buying of lead was moderate for October and November needs at unchanged prices. Labor difficulties in various metal trades made consumers cautious. At the same time a large part of October and a fair portion of November have been covered. Ore prices were steadier.

Zinc Trade Quiet.

Zinc was quiet following reports that in the two preceding weeks a large business had been put through quietly for nearby and forward needs. However, orders were not evenly distributed between smelters and, while some were said to be anxious to sell, no price changes were reported.

Antimony was steady and unchanged with a slightly better inquiry.

LETTERS

Letters of general interest on business and finance of not more than 200 words will be published from time to time.

RFC Credit Policies.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Your article in this morning's paper about preferred stock issues by banks is very interesting.

Any proposal to provide more funds for banks to loan when they are already suffering from overabundance of loanable funds is so ridiculous as hardly to merit serious discussion; however, if some gesture on the part of the banks is necessary, should not the large national banks, such as the Chase, Continental, and First National, Chicago, issue circulating bank notes against government bonds, seeing that they now have no circulation? They would have to pay no interest on such notes, and their only outlay would be a tax of either ½ of 1 per cent or 1 per cent.

Such notes would probably replace a corresponding amount of federal reserve notes, against which a gold reserve is now carried by the federal reserve banks. It might be argued that such a plan would not result in any increase in credit, which is frankly admitted, but neither would the capital note issue accomplish such increase since it would represent for the most part conversion of existing deposits into notes.

The R. F. C. appears to have only one or two motives: 1. Political influence in the management of banks. 2. Furnishing capital to weak banks to offset losses, and making all banks take the same stock so that such banks cannot be identified. G. M. JASPER.

Three Contradictions.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—For absolute inconsistence I have never read anything that equals Howard Wood's article of Oct. 1, 1933, on the effects of inflation talk. He positively contradicts himself three times.

HENRY E. VALLELY.

It Gave Him a Pain.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Howard Wood in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE on the "rubber dollar" gives me a pain. You are not a bit optimistic. It looks to me like a slur on the President. Your article does harm. We have to thank God that we have Roosevelt now. You must be a disgruntled Republican.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Good Times on Rubber Dollars.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—We had some pretty good times with the "rubber dollar" of 1914-'21. The dollar of 1921 was valued at 33 cents compared with 100 cents in 1914 in purchasing power. R. V. T.

Compulsory Bond Registrations.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—The accounts of the Kansas bond scandal should be read with apprehension because of the large sum involved, the apparent ease with which the crime was committed, and the comparative safety that shielded those guilty. It is to be hoped that in the last several years, years of economic turmoil during which the peak of speculation and depths of depression have been reached, and in which politics suffered degradation and crime became rampant, such cases have not been multiplied throughout the country.

The case exposes a weakness in the protective armor of gilt-edged securities which calls for immediate attention. Farsighted people, anticipating the possibility of such a scandal, have suggested in the past that trusts and organizations concerned with investments register or otherwise certify their bonds, the object being to confirm the genuineness of their investments and to bring to light any possible falsification.

Compulsory registration would act as a deterrent to those criminally inclined and provide an additional check on illegal or unethical speculation by those charged with the investment of other people's money, since registered bonds are not so readily manipulated.

Recent experiences have taught us that the investor was not getting his full measure of protection. This applies to holders of insurance policies and to beneficiaries of trusts. As a result, some legislation has been passed pointing in that direction; in some ways it is possibly overreaching; in others, inadequate. The Illinois state insurance department, now preparing a new code, should find this matter timely for serious thought and pertinent to constructive action. JOSEPH GREGORICH.
